FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The Navy in Hawaii

BY REAR ADM. C. H. McMorris, USN
Commandant, Fourteenth Naval District

TO the armed forces veterans who visited Pearl Harbor during World War II, this important naval base in the mid-Pacific is remembered as a hustling, bustling operational base. They perhaps remember the ever-busy

cranes, the mass
of ships, and the constant scamperings of small boats in the harbor waters.

Today, seven years after the end of World War II, Pearl Harbor is again
stirring with activity, although only slightly reminiscent
of those hectic
war years.

But, compared with the doldrums of pre-Korea days, the Navy is on the go in Hawaii.

And not only in Hawaii but throughout the 14th Naval District, which extends to the outlying bases of Kwajalein and Midway Island.

The Commandant of the 14th Naval District also commands the Hawaiian Sea Frontier and the Naval Base, Pearl Harbor.

Although the duties of the three commands are closely inter-related, they are separate and distinct with regard to duties and responsibilities. Following is a brief breakdown of each command, showing how the activities of each have expanded during the past two years.

The Pearl Harbor Naval Base is the most active naval shore installation outside continental United States.

Military operations in Korea and the growing tension in the Far East have resulted in expansion of all activities at Pearl Harbor, and more than doubled the number of civilian and military personnel within the command.

The major shore activities within the base are the Shipyard, Supply Center, Ammunition Depot, Submarine Base,
Marine Barracks and Receiving Station.

Another activity, which has grown by leaps and bounds, is the Fleet Training Group, with its subordinate units. As an indication of its increasing importance to the Pacific Fleet, in the past six months 1,089 officers and 9,637 enlisted men from transient ships have received varied types of training ashore, and 24 ships have been exercised from two to five weeks at sea.

The ideal climate of Hawaii was chiefly responsible for the expansion of this train-

Seven Air Force general officers nominated this week by President Truman for promotion to four-star and three-star rank are, top row, left to right, Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, Lt. Gen. Otto P. Weyland, Major General Laurence C. Craigie, and Charles P. Cabell; bottom row, left to right, Major General Charles T. Myers, Joseph Smith and Leon W. Johnson. General Norstad, who is Commander in Chief of both the U. S. Air Forces in Europe and the Allied Air Forces in Central Europe, was named for four-star rank as was General Weyland, who commands the Far East Air Forces. The others were named for three-star rank. General Craigie is Deputy Chief of Staff, Development, USAFHQ; General Cabell directs the Joint Staff, Joint Chiefs of Staff; General Myers is Commander in Chief, U. S. Northeast Command; General Smith commands the Military Air Transport Service, and General Johnson commands the Continental Air Command. All will continue in their present assignments.

Troops Move Forward Immediately in A-Blast

Troop participation in the atomic tests at Yucca Flat recorded a new first over the week-end as Army troops were rushed to the "forward area" immediately following the A-blast.

Although three tests involving troops had been staged earlier, the latest test, on 1 June, was the only one in which foot soldiers were routed from their foxholes for immediate movement into the atom-scarred area. Previously, radiological monitors had preceded the ground forces into the blast area to make certain that it was safe from radiation hazards.

During last Sunday's test, one thousand troops crouched in foxholes about 7,000 yards from a tower on which the atomic device was detonated. Within seconds after the explosion, the infantrymen began a simulated attack toward the crater where the tower had been dissolved. Led by five 46-ton Patton tanks, they advanced in battle formation until halted by danger of radiation. The Army did not reveal how close the field forces got to "ground zero" before they were stopped.

Brig. Gen. Harry P. Storke, director of the exercises, said the maneuver concluded troop participation in the current

Move to Transfer Service Hospitals Appears Doomed

The proposal to transfer Army, Navy and Air Force hospitals and some service medical personnel to a new civilian Department of Health appeared this week to be gasping its last breath.

The House Expenditures committee announced this week that it will hold omnibus hearings covering all of the remaining recommendations of the Hoover Commission except the medical one, which it said it would delay until the Senate Committee acted on it. Meanwhile a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Government Operations is planning to recommend that the medical bill be dropped from further consideration. Instead, the subcommittee will urge that a committee composed of four civilians and a representative of each of the government medical agencies, including the Armed Services, be appointed to study means of eliminating any overlapping.

The original recommendation was adopted by the Hoover Commission in spite of disagreements and minority reports against it. It has been consistently opposed by the Department of Defense, the Bureau of the Budget, the American Medical Association and other agencies.

Finletter Foresees Air Academy "Soon"

Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K.
Finletter told graduates of the U. S.
Military Academy this week that the Air Force soon will "have its own Academy."
He said he believes the necessary authorizing legislation "will be enacted in this Congress."

Secretary Finletter said "The standards of the new Academy will be those of its two great predecessors." In preparing for it, he said the Air Force has considered many innovations, but "The more we look into the standards of West Point and Annapolis the more we become convinced that if we could . . . produce the results that the two older Academies do, we could ask no better."

He told the new Army officers that there has seldom been such an opportunity for service to their country as now. "From a strictly military point of view," he said, "your task will be more difficult than that of any of your predecessors. You receive your commissions and take up your work at a time when the greatest arms revolution in history is in progress."

"This is a time," he said, "when the development in the striking power of weapons and correspondingly, the changes in strategy and tactics are jumping forward by mutations, by leaps and bounds. It is your responsibility to see to it that our strategy and tactics keep pace with the dazzling development of science as applied to the development of weapons."

Advances in science since 1939 have been at such a "fantastically rapid rate," Mr. Finletter said, "that the great powers now have weapons so devastating in their nature that it is highly likely that both sides will destroy themselves, or at least the essence of their civilization, if they should ever go into all-out conflict."

He told the graduates they must help to keep "in being at all times a force so strong and capable of such immediate application of power that an enemy seeking war would look at it and say,
"This is not a good thing to take on. It will hit us too hard if we take it on, and we wouldn't be able to destroy it any-
how. I guess we had better not try it."

Back of such a force, he said, "is the ideal that if we keep it long enough and steadily enough, the world—even the most unlikely parts of it—will see that there is no go in trying to conquer by force and will come around to sanity" and to an "enforced foolproof system of disarmament."

He also said it is as important for the graduates to understand political problems "as it is for the leaders in our foreign policy to understand the facts of the Military Establishment."

Red Attacks May Forecast Offensive; UN Sea Power Presses Close Blockade

RED CHINESE troops tested Allied defenses in Western Korea this week with a series of light probing attacks, but were driven off by United Nations troops supported by artillery fire. The type of attacks suggested the possibility that these were preliminary to major offensive action. However, such speculation was discounted by Allied military leaders who feel that such an operation at present is improbable.

The sector in which the probing attacks were made is regarded as a sensitive area, and constitutes a natural invasion route to South Korea. If a sustained major offensive were to be undertaken by the Reds a heavy assault on this front would probably occur. However, the Allies hold very strong defensive positions here, manned by some of their best troops, and are confident of their ability to repulse the Reds with heavy loss to the enemy.

Weather in Korea during the next few weeks is expected to be favorable for military operations, and if a major offensive is planned for this summer by the Reds it will probably take place soon. Heavy seasonal rains which usually fall late in July and during August would make offensive warfare difficult late in the summer.

Enemy Nears Million

During the past year the numerical strength of the enemy has greatly increased and now approaches a million men in Korea. There has also been a marked build-up in Red air power, in artillery, in armor, and in military supplies. This menacing increase in the potential capabilities of the enemy has led some observers to conclude that an early Red offensive may be in prospect. However, the relatively balanced distribution of enemy troops across the front, and the extensive field fortifications and land mines installed by the Reds appear to point to a defense in depth rather than to early offensive operations. Furthermore, the strong defensive positions occupied by the Allies, together with United Nations' air dominance of the battle area, would make a major Red attack extremely costly to the enemy.

On all sectors of the land front this week there was lively patrol activity, and an increased use of artillery by both sides, with Allied armor participating in a number of light engagements. There were frequent reconnaissance raids by small units of both sides, in an effort to determine the strength and disposition of opposing front-line forces.

Allied warships continued to maintain a close blockade of both coasts of North Korea, keeping up a harassing fire on Red shore installations and on coastal targets of opportunity. The U. S. Battleship Iowa and its escort, the Destroyer Burke, moved close inshore in the Kojia area of the east coast for precision fire on frontline enemy positions.

Land and carrier-based planes pounded enemy rail lines and vehicular traffic on highways throughout North Korea. Numerous close support missions were flown along the entire front.

Red Air Lacking

There was almost a complete absence of enemy air throughout North Korea during most of the week. American Air Force F-86 Sabre jets patrolled deep into Red territory almost every day without encountering enemy planes. However, on 6 June, seven enemy MIGs were shot down and two others damaged in a battle in Northwest Korea. During the previous week six Red jets were shot down by American Sabres, with no losses of American planes in air combat. Only one Allied plane was lost to enemy ground fire, and three were lost to undetermined causes. It was the lowest weekly loss of Allied planes in two months.

On the ground on the western front enemy groups up to two platoons in strength made repeated probing attacks on United Nations outposts northwest of Yenchon. The attacks were launched soon after midnight and fighting continued for more than two hours. At one advance position Allied troops withdrew temporarily to enable artillery fire to be placed on the Reds. This forced an enemy retreat and the position was reoccupied. At all other points in the west the enemy attacks were beaten back by reinforced United Nations troops occupying the forward areas.

A small enemy unit probed a United Nations outpost east of Panmunjom, but withdrew when Allied reinforcements arrived. West of Korangpo-ri there was a sharp quarter-hour hand-to-hand fight, during which a small enemy group was repulsed when it received small arms and automatic weapons fire, and accurately thrown hand grenades.

West of Chorwon, United Nations troops at two small advance positions routed an attacking enemy unit after a fight lasting an hour and 45 minutes. Allied tanks fired on an enemy formation on the west bank of the Imjin River, near its confluence with the Han River, inflicting an estimated 30 casualties.

Allied artillery fired on three enemy convoys, each of 30 vehicles, east of Pyongyang. South of that town, Allied tanks inflicted several casualties and destroyed enemy bunkers. In the same area, a small enemy group probed an Allied advance position, but withdrew after a 20-minute fight. South of Kumwha, United Nations troops repulsed a light enemy attack on an outpost.

United Nations artillery dispersed two enemy groups in the Mundung-ni Valley and killed or wounded a number of Reds near the Satae-ri Valley on the eastern front. Enemy artillery and mortars fired 1,000 rounds on an Allied position in this area. A sharp patrol fight continued for 40 minutes northwest of Kansong. Allied artillery barrages inflicted a number of enemy casualties northwest of the Punch Bowl. Elsewhere on the eastern front there were numerous light patrol clashes.

Sea Forces Active

Allied naval vessels and carrier-based planes raked enemy shore installations and communications centers during the week with shellfire and bombs.

Near the eastern terminus of the land battle line the United States Battleship Iowa moved close inshore near Kojia and opened precision fire with 40mm guns on enemy shore batteries and other installations. The Iowa and her accompanying destroyer, U.S.S. Burke, destroyed several buildings and gun positions, and registered direct hits on supply areas, causing several secondary explosions.

The U. S. Destroyer Buck moved north from the east coast battle line to hammer ammunition and supply dumps in night bombardments. In daylight attacks the Buck hit several enemy warehouses.

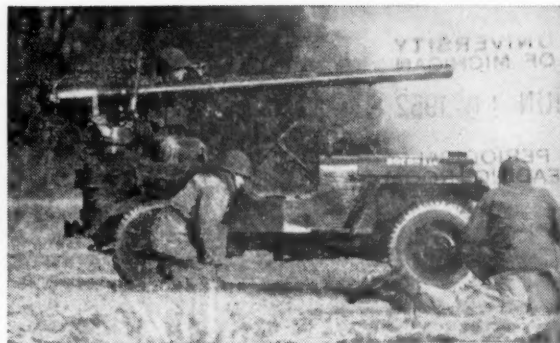

The U. S. Heavy Cruiser St. Paul and the Destroyer Tucker provided floating artillery for Allied ground troops along the east coast, hitting mortar and artillery positions, and bunkers. The U. S. Destroyer Radford provided gunfire support for inshore minesweeping operations along the east coast.

At Wonsan the U. S. Destroyers Lofberg and O'Bannon destroyed a number of important enemy targets, and at night illuminated the area for bombing and strafing runs by Allied aircraft. The U. S. Destroyers Thomason and Endicott and the Canadian Destroyer Nootka patrolled the northeast coast of North Korea, and fired on shore installations, but heavy fog prevented observation of results.

In the Yellow Sea, south of Haeju, on the west coast, the British Light Cruiser Belfast hit enemy troop concentrations, with spotters reporting excellent coverage of the target areas. Other British Commonwealth light warships engaged enemy targets in the same general area of the west coast. The British Destroyer Constant captured an enemy junk while on offshore patrol.

A 200-mile rail section from Wonsan north to Tanchon was well covered during the week by bombs dropped by Navy flyers from the U. S. Heavy Carriers Philippine Sea and Valley Forge, off the northeast coast. Rails were cut

Personnel of the Ordnance Center, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., fire the 105-MM recoilless rifle during a field demonstration. It is one of the recent weapons to bolster fire power of ground troops in numerous places, and bridges, trucks, ox-carts, buildings, gun positions, a supply dump, and a steam shovel were destroyed, and many casualties were inflicted.

Bad Flying Weather

Despite adverse flying weather during part of the time, war planes of the Far East Air Force and attached Marine and Allied units this week pressed interdiction strikes deep into Communist territory, carrying devastation to communications lines and other enemy installations. Heavy attacks were also made on enemy front-line troops and on supply centers in the forward areas.

Allied fighter-bombers concentrated largely on low-level, rail-cutting strikes in two principal Red areas. One of these was north and south of Huichon, and the other in the vicinity of Singosan, 20 miles south of Wonsan.

Propeller-driven F-51 Mustangs, F-84 Thunder Jets, and F-80 Shooting Stars blasted rails near Huichon in scores of places, and F-84s destroyed several rail cars and buildings. American and South Korean Mustangs and Marine aircraft cratered rail lines at Singosan in numerous places.

American Shooting Stars and Marine fighter-bombers flew repeated close support missions over the battle line. Directed by T-6 Mosquitoes they knocked out many gun positions, personnel shelters, and enemy-occupied buildings.

Medium bombers from Okinawa, using electronic aiming devices, dropped 110 tons of high explosives at night on the rail bridge at Kwaksan, midway between Chongju and Sonchon, deep in Northwest Korea. Crews reported intense flak in the target area. Enemy night fighters were sighted but did not attack.

Other Superforts dropped 100 tons of high explosives on the rail bridge complex at Huichon, a vital Red transportation link between Kangye and Kunu, in north Central Korea. Meagre flak was encountered. Still other B-29s dropped bombs on enemy front-line positions.

Night-flying B-26 light bombers and Marine fighter-bombers attacked enemy southbound highway traffic, destroying many trucks. They also destroyed a locomotive and several railway cars, and attacked a marshalling yard at Anju.

American Sabre Jets flew daily patrols along the Manchurian border, but during most of the week failed to see any enemy planes. On 6 June American Sabres destroyed seven MIGs and damaged two others.

Chemical Corps Opens Plant

The Army's new multi-million-dollar chlorine plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala., has been placed in operation, slightly more than a year after construction was started.

It will be operated, under contract, by the Monsanto Chemical Company of St. Louis, producing chlorine required by the Army Chemical Corps for the production of defense materials.

Navy Dental Lecture

The Naval Dental School, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., under the command of Capt. R. W. Taylor, DC, USN, will present a special lecture on Friday, 20 June in Building 122, Room 224, Dental Corps Annex, at 2:00 P.M. The guest speaker will be Luzerne G. Jordan, D.D.S., F.A.C.D. He will speak on "Incisal Guidance and Other Factors of Importance in Full Artificial Denture Construction."

Senate Passes Extension Of Special Medical Pay

The Senate this week voted to extend special-inducement pay for doctors and dentists serving with the Armed Forces, after rejecting two amendments offered by Senator Paul Douglas (D-Ill.).

The bill as passed by the Senate will extend the equalizing pay now given to physicians and dentists for 10 months, from 2 Sept. 1952 to 1 July 1953.

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D-Wyo.), in explaining the bill, pointed out that prior to passage of the Medical Officers Procurement Act of 1947, "physicians and dentists were leaving the military services in great numbers." Since passage of the Act, he said "there have been but 314 resignations from the Navy and 347 from the Army," as contrasted to the 1,100 who left the services in the 2-year period prior to the enactment of that law.

Senator Hunt said the additional money "should not be considered extra pay, for it is, in every sense of the word, an equalizing pay." He said the income for a line officer over a period of 30 years is $212,000, while a medical officer's income, without the equalizing pay, is $170,000, or $40,000 to the advantage of the line officer. With the equalizing pay, the medical officer will earn a total in the 30-year period of his service of $202,000, so that with the equalizing pay the medical officer has still approximately $10,000 less total income than has the line officer.

Senator Douglas objected to the bill and asked that it be amended so as to provide only $5 a month extra pay for doctors and dentists, and no such pay for those called or ordered to active duty without their consent. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 50-4. Those voting for it were Senators Douglas, Thomas C. Hennings, jr. (D-Mo.), A. Willis Robertson (D-Va.), and George A. Smathers (D-Fla.).

A second amendment offered by Senator Douglas was also defeated. It would have prevented any medical or dental officer from drawing flight pay in addition to the special-inducement pay.

Senator Douglas said "approximately 1,000 officers—975, to be precise—who are receiving double bonuses, really cannot be said to be aviators. They are not aviators. If they are doctors, they will receive the medical bonus. Well and good. I do not believe they should get even that, but if the Senate believes that they should receive a medical bonus, very well."

Senator Hunt, in objecting to the amendment, said "a good many of the 975 are actually in the air, flying. They do not need to be flying planes, but they are in the air and are subject to the same hazards as though they were pilots." He said "they are administering to patients in planes."

Gen. Eisenhower Retires

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower retired from active duty this week after 37 years of active service as a commissioned officer of the Army, in addition to four years as a cadet at the Military Academy. At his own request, General Eisenhower was placed on the retired list without pay, thus waiving $19,451 in annual pay and allowances.

The current military appropriations act provides that no funds are available for the pay of officers who retire during the fiscal year for reasons other than physical disability, age, or operation of law, unless the Secretary of Defense certifies that retention on active duty would occasion a hardship or would not be in the interest of the service. General Eisenhower requested that no special certification be made in his case.

General Eisenhower will not be eligible for retirement for age until next December. He requested retirement in order that he might feel free to express himself on political matters, since such activity would be inappropriate for an officer on active duty, as well as being contrary to Army Regulations and the provisions of the Hatch Act. General Eisenhower is among the leading contenders for the Republican nomination for President. Should he receive the nomination the General plans to resign his commission as a retired officer, thus severing all connection with the military service.

While the retirement of General Eisenhower was officially announced on Tuesday, 3 June, it became effective on 31 May. In a brief ceremony at the river entrance of the Pentagon, Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett gave the General the orders placing him on the retired list. Mr. Lovett said:

"Your country and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization have given you assignments without precedent in the modern world. You have discharged your duties with courageous ability, and have thereby brought credit to your country and the Armed Services. We take pride in the services you have rendered the world and the United States."

The retirement orders for General Eisenhower read:

"By direction of the President, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, 03822, United States Army, upon his own application, is retired from active service on 31 May 1952, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 30 June 1882 and the Act of Congress approved 23 March 1946, after more than forty years of active Federal Service. He is relieved from assignment, Office of the Chief of Staff, United States Army, and from further active duty on 31 May 1952, and at the proper time will proceed to his home. Permanent change of station. The travel directed is necessary in the military service."

After donning civilian clothes General Eisenhower left Washington by air last Tuesday for Abilene, Kans., his old home, where on Wednesday he delivered an important address in connection with the cornerstone laying of a museum being constructed as a repository for the General's papers and mementoes of his long and distinguished service. Later he plans to deliver a Flag Day address at Detroit.

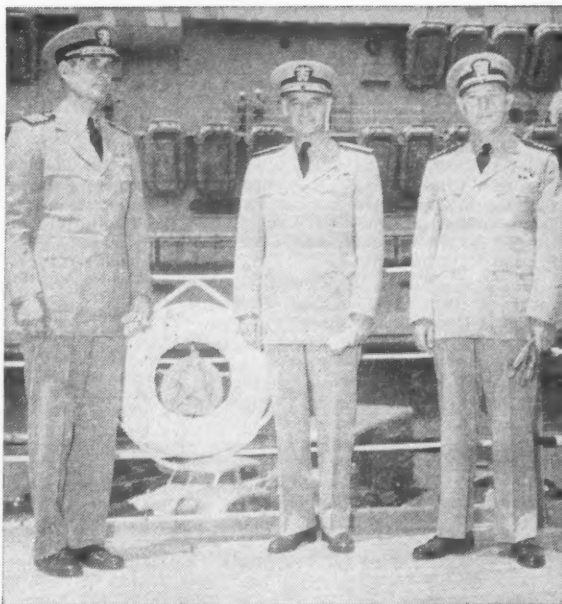

During his short stay in Washington General Eisenhower made a report on his European command to the President, the Secretary of Defense, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and received from the President a fourth Oak Leaf Cluster to his Distinguished Service Medal.

The General also conferred with military leaders of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Washington and expressed his appreciation of the cooperation and support he had received during his tour of duty in Europe. Lt. Gen. Paul Ely of France and Air Chief Marshal Sir William Elliot of Great Britain expressed the deep gratitude of the Standing Group and the Military Representatives Committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization for the manner in which General Eisenhower had established and supervised his European command.

Navy Wind Tunnel Bids

The Navy is asking for bids on the last major construction phase of a wind tunnel that will enable testing of model aircraft at transonic speeds. Completion is expected in 1953 for the tunnel which will be built at the David Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md.

Three Missouri Skipper—Capt. John Sylvester, left, present Commanding Officer of the USS Missouri, poses with two former Missouri commanding officers at the Naval Base, Norfolk, Va. Rear Adm. James H. Thach, center, commanded the Missouri from February 1948 to February 1949. He is now Commander, Cruiser Division Six. Capt. George C. Wright, now Chief of Staff to the Commander, Cruiser Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, commanded the Missouri from March 1951 to October 1951.

Marine Corps Bill

Although three weeks have elapsed since the House passed the bill for the extension of the Marine Corps, no conferees have yet been appointed by either house of Congress.

Inasmuch as the House amended the Senate bill, normal procedure would be for the Senate to disagree with the amendments of the House, name conferees, and ask the House for a conference. Then the House would appoint conferees and the two groups would meet to iron out the differences between the two versions. However, although the House passed the bill on 16 May none of these actions has been taken. The bill is still on the desk of the President of the Senate.

It is generally understood that the Senate will disagree and ask for conferees and it is also understood that the reason this step has not been taken is that a large number of those who would be appointed to the conference committee have been out of town, and that when they have returned and are available for a meeting the formal action will be taken.

The House bill goes further than the Senate version in that it sets a floor as well as a ceiling for Marine Corps strength and makes the Commandant a full-fledged voting member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff instead of a "consultant" as in the Senate bill. There is a strong belief that the President may veto the bill when it reaches his desk, and an equally strong belief that both Houses will pass the measure over his veto.

USNA "Honor Men"

Midshipman James Richard Thomas of Upper Darby, Pa., who completed his four year course at the U. S. Naval Academy with a 90.16 per cent average, was graduated first in his class of 783 during commencement exercises on 6 June. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Albert Thomas of 9 Arbor Lea, Upper Darby, Pa.

In approving the Order of Merit for the Class of 1952, Vice Adm. Harry W. Hill, USN, Superintendent, also announced that Midshipman Thomas Anthony Julian, 22, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Julian of Hollywood, Calif., stood second in the class with a four year average of 90.15 per cent.

Midshipman Robert John Michaels, 24, a former Navy enlisted man, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Michaels of Fifth and Spruce Streets, North Wales, Pa., was third in the class.

Eighty-three members of the Class achieved "85 per cent or more of the maximum aggregate multiple for the completed course" and were graduated "with distinction." An additional 553 midshipmen who achieved "75 per cent or more but less than 85 per cent of the maximum aggregate multiple for the completed course" were graduated "with credit."

Briscoe Takes Far East Naval Command From Joy

Admiral C. Turner Joy this week turned over command of the Naval Forces, Far East, to Vice Adm. Robert P. Briscoe.

The Far Eastern Naval leader, who had also served as head of the UN truce delegation in Korea, will become Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy late this month or early in July.

In a change of command ceremony he said he was ending his cruise in the Far East "with a deep sense of pride and gratitude. No man could stand where I stand today and not be proud and grateful."

"It has been a privilege to command one of the three service components of a great United Nations team—a team that has gallantly and decisively stemmed the tide of aggression and preserved freedom in a part of the world where freedom was very seriously threatened."

Mentioning the ten months in which he faced the enemy across the conference table, Admiral Joy said, "If there are still those in the free world who believe that the enemy can be moved by logic, or that he is susceptible to moral appeal, or that he is willing to act in good faith, those remaining few should immediately disabuse themselves of that notion." He added, "It was a mistake to assume, or even hope that the enemy was capable of acting in good faith."

Small Business Contracts

Small business firms received more than a fifth of the money obligated by the Navy for defense contracts in April, Vice Adm. C. W. Fox, Chief of Naval Material, said this week.

The amount small business received in prime contracts was $318,312,000, or 23.3 per cent of the total. For the first ten months of the current fiscal year, small firms have received $1,795,000,000 or 22.7 per cent of total Navy prime contracts. This compares with $791,754,000 or 17.5 per cent for the corresponding period in the previous fiscal year.

Naval School Graduation

Graduation exercises for the thirteenth officer class of the Naval School of Hospital Administration, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., will be held on 17 June, Comdr. Max E. Zimmerman, MSC, Commanding Officer of the School, announced this week.

The exercises will terminate the 10-month course of instruction for the class of 23 officers of the Navy's Medical Service and Hospital Corps. Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, MC, USN, Surgeon General of the Navy, will be principal speaker.

The next class will convene on 2 Sept. with an expected enrollment of 40 officers.

DefDept and NG Clash Over Reserve Bill

The Defense Department and the National Guard have clashed in hearings now being conducted on the Armed Forces Reserve Act (HR 5426).

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, Assistant Secretary of Defense, said the Defense Department "was astonished to learn that the National Guard Association had testified . . . that the Bill would Federalize the Guard."

She said the Department had been in almost continual contact with senior representatives of the Guard and "this is the first intimation we have had" that the Guard "is dissatisfied with its own amendments to the Bill." In fact, Mrs. Rosenberg said, "some of the provisions objected to as Federalizing the Guard were inserted in the bill at the specific request of the National Guard Association." She cited a number of provisions which she said were originally sponsored by the Guard and defended by it before Congressional committees, and which the Guard is now opposing.

Defends Bill

Mrs. Rosenberg strongly defended the bill. She declared it "does not impose a single new obligation on any reservist" and that its passage "will not require any reservist to serve a single day longer, either on active duty or as a reservist, than he would otherwise be required to serve by law."

"On the contrary," she said, "this bill provides, clear, sensible, equitable procedures whereby a man can reduce his vulnerability for recall to active duty—it spells out how a man can be sure that he will be one of the last to be called rather than always be in danger of being the first to be called. It permits a young veteran to start planning a life, to begin raising a family, to complete his education, to establish firm roots in his business career without the constant fear for eight years that he may be one of the few called to defend his country again, perhaps for the second or third time."

Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, President of the National Guard Association, testified that some of the amendments to the bill, "notably" those proposed by the Guard itself, "were in the main drafted under duress and strain." Since passage of the bill, he said, it has been possible for the Association to further study the provisions of the bill, but he added that additional study is required and the Guard contends "that no action should be taken on the bill at this time."

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Adjutant General of Maryland, discussed the Association's objections in detail. He said it is his "sincere belief that the bill . . . is a bad bill, and while there are some good features in it, the bad features outweigh the good ones." He said the Guard Association "cannot accept this bill, and we respectfully but firmly request that it be killed."

Reserves' Support

Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans, Executive Director of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, said his group is "extremely hopeful that by passage of HR 5426 better days are ahead for the development of a practical, reasonable and economical system of defense for our country." He said, "We furthermore believe that the enactment of this bill into law would go a long way toward raising the stature of the reserves and to help bring about the desire of all reservists—the right to be ready."

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce asked that the bill be amended so reservists alerted for active duty could be screened to determine whether their greatest contribution to national security could be made through military service or through their civilian occupations.

Other Defense Department officials appearing before the Committee in support of the bill included Maj. Gen. Edmund C. Lynch, Director of Manpower Requirements, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense; Rear Adm. William K. Phillips, Assistant Chief of Naval Operations (Naval Reserve); Brig. Gen. Randolph McC. Pate, Director of the Marine Corps Reserve.

Army Reduces Duty Tour

The Army this week announced a new policy for minimum duty tours in the United States.

Personnel returning from the Far East Command will be eligible for further assignment overseas after nine months in the States. Previously they had been eligible after 12 months at home.

Army personnel returning from other overseas areas will be eligible for foreign service after six instead of nine months.

In announcing the reduction "in the length of service within the United States or territory of residence required between overseas tours of duty," the Army said "Individuals may volunteer to waive the mandatory interval between foreign service tours."

Retires at Manlius

Author of two books on early American military history and senior member of The Manlius School faculty, Maj. Jas. R. Jacobs, USA-Ret., will retire from teaching in June.

Major Jacobs, for many years head of the Manlius history department, penned his first book, Tarnished Warrior, in 1937. A biography of Maj. Gen. James Wilkinson, who commanded the Regular Army in 1794, won wide acclaim. His second book, The Beginning of the U. S. Army, 1783-1812, was published in 1947 and also won plaudits.

A graduate of the University of Texas, and holder of a master's degree from the University of Chicago, Major Jacobs, during World War II served as headmaster at Manlius. He served in the Regular Army from 1911 until his retirement for physical disability in 1923.

Major Jacobs has served under five superintendents at Manlius since 1925, the present one being Maj. Gen. Ray W. Barker, USA-Ret. He plans to move to South Carolina, where he will continue work on his third book, a study of the War of 1812.

Maj. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen, Deputy for Special Weapons to the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, Logistics and Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, Operations (Guided Missiles), has been assigned as Commandant of the Antiaircraft and Guided Missiles Branch of The Artillery School, Ft. Bliss, Tex.

Maj. Gen. Francis W. Farrell, recently returned from the Far East Command, succeeds General Mickelsen.

Maj. Gen. Thomas J. Cross, recently returned from the Far East Command, has been assigned as Commanding General, 5th Armored Division, Camp Chaffee, Ark.

Brig. Gen. Oliver P. Newman, now in the Far East Command, will be assigned at a date to be announced to the 9th Infantry Division, Ft. Dix, N. J.

Canal Zone Governor

Brig. Gen. John S. Seybold, USA, was administered the oath of office as Governor of the Canal Zone by Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., at a ceremony in the Pentagon on 27 May. General Seybold succeeds Brig. Gen. Francis K. Newcomer, USA-Ret., whose four-year term as Governor expired earlier last month.

Since May 1951 General Seybold had been Assistant Chief of Engineers for Personnel and Administration, Office of the Chief of Engineers, Washington, D. C.

168th MP Bn. Moves

The 168th Military Police Battalion, a former Tennessee National Guard unit, has been ordered transferred from Ft. George G. Meade, Md., to Ft. Knox, Ky. It started moving on 6 June. Lt. Col. Aubrey Kenworthy is commanding officer.

Dental Corps Graduates

The following dental officers have completed a course of advanced instruction at the Medical Field Service School, Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., and have been assigned as follows:

Lieutenant Colonels Edward P. Gaurantillo, to the Office of The Surgeon General in Washington; Earl R. Nichols, to Ft. Bragg, N. C.; Karl F. Ehrlich, to Medical Field Service School; Raymond W. Swanson, to Ft. Bliss, Tex.; Garnet P. Francis, jr., to Sacramento, Signal Depot, Sacramento, Calif.; Maurice A. Meador, to Ft. Lawton, Wash., and William O. Orsinger, to Sixth Army Central Dental Laboratory, Presidio of San Francisco.

Lt. Col. S. Kingdon Avery, DC, recently on duty at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., has been assigned to the Reserve Officer Training Corps' Instructor Group at Washington University Dental School in St. Louis, Mo. In addition to his other duties, Colonel Avery will also attend a course of instruction in dental prosthetics.

Sends Orphanage Gift

A $100 contribution from the 25th Division Association for the 27th Infantry Regiment's adopted orphanage in Osaka has been received by Col. Norman B. Edwards, regimental commander of the Wolfhounds in Korea.

The contribution will be added to the $1,480.45 collected in April by the Wolfhounds for the traditional "Christmas every pay day" for their adopted children. Held every month since December 1949, the collections to date have netted some $105,000. The money has been used to build and furnish spacious new quarters, schools and playgrounds for the orphans.

Benning Appoints Management Improvement Officers

Management improvement officers have been appointed for each activity at Ft. Benning, Ga., Col. Daniel Hundley, Infantry Center comptroller, has announced.

Their appointment follows a Management Improvement Conference held there 26 May to study methods of "getting more defense out of the defense dollar." They will be responsible for correlating cost consciousness activities and for submitting quarterly reports on supply and manpower economy programs to the comptroller's office.

The management improvement program here includes manpower economy, work measurement, work simplification, Army efficiency awards, cost consciousness, supply economy, paper conservation and machine utilization.

Gen. Finlay to New Duties

Brig. Gen. Luke W. Finlay, currently assigned to the European Command as Chief of the General Purchasing Division with offices in Heidelberg, was relieved from active duty effective 30 May.

At the same time he accepted an appointment by the Secretary of Defense to a new position in the office of the Special Representative in Europe, Ambassador William H. Draper, jr., as Deputy for Defense Affairs.

1st Arm. Div. Reunion

The Fifth Annual Reunion of the 1st Armored Division Association will be held at Hotel William Penn, Pittsburgh, Pa., from Friday, 29 Aug., to Sunday, 31 Aug.

Anyone desiring any information may communicate with Leo B. Conner, Secretary-Treasurer, 1st Armored Division Association, 115 Seventeenth Street, N.W., Washington 6, D. C., or John V. Talotta, General Chairman of the Reunion, 5154 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh 24, Pa.

Ft. Hood Housing

About 40 housing units at "Walker Village," Ft. Hood, Tex., will be completed and ready for occupation early in June. The remainder of the units of the $4,470,000 Wherry housing project under construction there will be completed as soon as possible.

Estimated rent for different types of quarters ranges from $117.50 to $65.00. A single, three-bedroom with ¾ bath, of the 100 type will rent for $117.50; a single, three-bedroom with bath, 200 type, $96; duplex, two-bedroom, bath, 300 type, $85; duplex, two-bedroom, bath, 400 type, $75; duplex, two-bedroom, bath, 500 type, $70; and triplex, two-bedroom, bath, 600 type, $65.

Gen. Grow Court Martial

An investigation of charges preferred against Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow, whose diary was alleged to have been compromised while he was Military Attache to Russia, has been completed and the Commanding General, Second Army, has announced that "trial by court martial is warranted."

An eight-man court will be convened at Fort George G. Meade, Md., to try General Grow. The sessions will be closed.

Members of the board are Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, Chief of Army Field Forces; Lt. Gen. Harold R. Bull, Commandant of the National War College; Lt. Gen. William M. Hoge, Commanding General of the 4th Army; Maj. Gen. Orlando Ward, Chief of Military History; Maj. Gen. James A. Lester, Commanding General of the San Francisco Port of Embarkation; Maj. Gen. Clift Andrus, Deputy CG, 2d Army; Maj. Gen. Leland Hobbs, Deputy CG, 1st Army; and Maj. Gen. Roscoe B. Woodruff, CG, XV Corps.

Allegations which were listed in charges against General Grow were improper recording of classified military information in private records, and failing properly to safeguard classified military information.

Atomic Tests

series of tests. General Storke said before the test that "a limited number of sheep" were being used under fire "because we want to learn, in advance of any possible wartime use of the atom bomb, the blast, thermal and radiation effects of any atomic explosion on humans." He said, "Since we obviously cannot expose humans to any practical tests, we are using the warm-blooded animal most available and closely resembling a human being. The use of these sheep will undoubtedly result in the saving of American lives if the atom bomb is ever used in the vicinity of our troops in wartimes."

He added, "The sheep are handled as humanely as possible and receive the same care and protection that would be available to soldiers under similar conditions. After the blast they are given priority attention by our veterinarian who is a member of the control group, the first group to approach the Ground Zero area after the shot."

Research Kits

Troops who took part in the test carried new experimental research kits developed at the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine and designed to tell how much sweating they actually did in the tense moments before the blast.

The kits were small bags containing cobalt chloride crystals which the men gripped in their hands. Dark blue when removed from the air-tight tubes in which they were packed, the crystals turned light blue, then lavender, then pink as they absorbed moisture from the soldiers' palms. By the change in color, psychologists hoped to learn how much anxiety the men felt while waiting for the explosion.

Asks Atomic Expansion

In the wake of the latest test, President Truman this week asked Congress for an additional $3.3 billion to begin an atomic energy expansion program which will extend over the next five years and eventually cost $4,200,000,000.

The President said only about 650 million dollars of the requested appropriation will be spent during fiscal 1953, but added that all of the money will be needed for advance obligation of production and procurement contracts. He said the program is "integral to the necessary strengthening of our military defenses," and that "current international conditions require that we proceed with dispatch to so strengthen our defenses."

The proposed appropriation would provide for more than double the number of atomic facilities now being operated or under construction.

Disability Retirement Pay

In decision B-100262, the Comptroller General has rendered the following composite ruling relative to entitlement to disability retirement pay:

"An officer of the Army of the United States released from active duty, not by reason of physical disability, prior to the enactment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949 who, subsequent to that date, was authorized to be hospitalized in an inactive status and who thereafter appeared before a physical evaluation board and was found to be physically disabled from the time of release from active duty, is not entitled to disability retirement pay under the provisions of section 415 of said Act, which grants the right of election to benefits under prior laws to certain members of the uniformed services hospitalized on the effective date of said act who were subsequently retired for physical disability.

"A federally-recognized officer of a State National Guard who had not been appointed an officer of the National Guard of the United States at the time he was injured in line of duty while performing inactive duty training (armory drill), was not a member of the uniformed services within the meaning of section 402 (c) of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, so as to be entitled to the disability retirement pay or the disability severance pay.

"An officer of the National Guard of the United States who suffers a disability as a result of a disease incurred in line of duty while serving on training duty for 90 days under section 99 of the National Defense Act of 1916, as amended, may not be granted disability retirement pay or disability severance pay under the provisions of section 402 (c) of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, authorizing such pay to members of the uniformed services for a disability resulting from an injury.

"An officer of the Army of the United States who was ordered to extended active duty for a period in excess of 30 days, subsequent to the enactment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, and who was thereafter released from such duty, not by reason of physical disability, is not entitled, upon the presentation of evidence that he was in fact disabled at the time of release, to disability retirement pay or disability severance pay under the provisions of section 402 (c) of the said act.

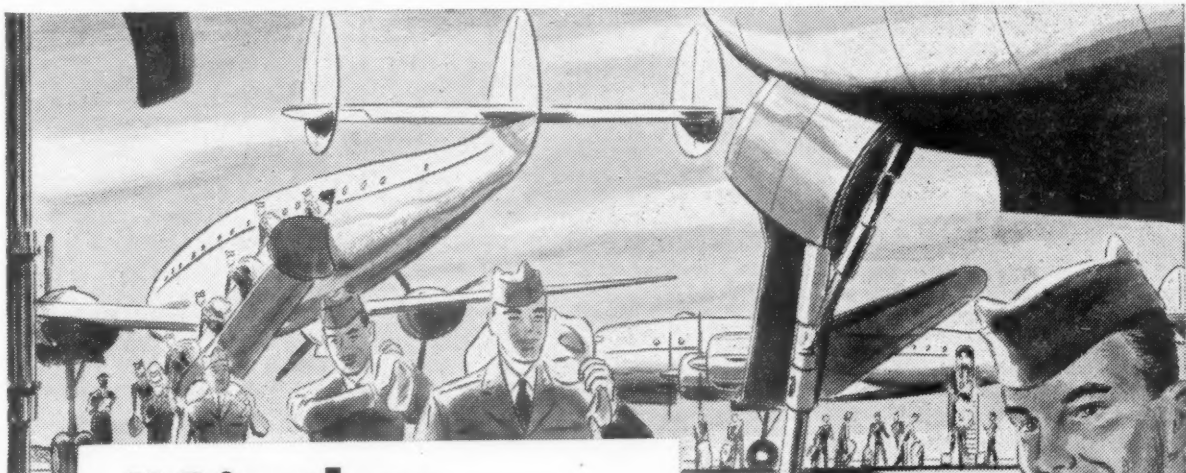

"Officers of the Army of the United States, Enlisted Reserve Corps, or National Guard of the United States, who were ordered to extended active duty for a period in excess of 30 days, and who were released from such duty, not by reason of physical disability, prior to the enactment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, are not entitled, upon presentation of evidence that they were in fact disabled at the time of release, to disability retirement pay or disability severance pay under the provisions of section 402 (c) of the said act."

CNO Addresses USNA Grads

Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations, addressed the graduating class at the U. S. Naval Academy on 6 June, and gave the newly commissioned ensigns a five-point formula for success.

"The most important ingredient of all," he told the Academy graduates, "is the concept of service—a deep and selfless devotion to your country." He said they must regard their careers as an opportunity to serve.

Admiral Fechteler said the essentials for success "consist not alone of techniques, skills and knowledge," but also embrace integrity, industry, thrift, professional competence, and service.

Integrity, he said, "implies a moral state of mind in which high principle and good character are inherent." Without integrity, he told the graduates, "you will certainly fail of greatness."

He also advised the graduates that they would never reach such exalted rank that they could "dispense with the business of hard work," or industry. Regarding thrift, he said "It is important to all of you . . . and it is important to your Government that you do not waste its money or its resources."

The Class of 1952, numbering 783, was the 112th class to graduate from the Naval Academy, and is the fifth largest since the Academy's founding in 1845.

The graduation exercises in historic Dahlgren Hall opened with an invocation by the Academy's senior chaplain, Comdr. Merle N. Young, Vice Adm. Harry W. Hill, Superintendent, spoke briefly before introducing Admiral Fechteler who presented diplomas to the graduating midshipmen, and administered the oath of office to the 518 members of the graduating class who were commissioned in the Navy.

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, administered the oath to the 61 graduates who were commissioned in the Marine Corps, and General Nathan F. Twining, Vice Chief of Staff of the Air Force, administered the oath to the 193 men entering the Air Force.

Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball was the guest of honor at the commencement exercises.

Navy Adopts Tie Clasp

A standard design tie clasp has been approved by the Secretary of the Navy as an optional uniform item.

As recommended by the Permanent Naval Uniform board, the clasp will be a slender, gold, undecorated bar style clasp with clasp fastener. It has been slightly grooved to prevent scratches from showing.

The new clasps will be available soon at the Naval Uniform Shop, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Navy exchanges and ship's stores.

When worn with the uniform coat, the clasps must be far enough down so as not to show.

MEDICAL CARE COMPARISON

The U. S. Army furnishes a battalion of troops more medical personnel and equipment than Russia provides for a division, Pentagon officials report.

Marine Generals Shifted

Brig. Gen. Robert O. Bare, USMC, will become Assistant Commander of the First Marine Division in Korea, as the result of command shifts announced this week by the Marine Corps.

General Bare, who has headed the Training and Replacement Command at Camp Pendleton, Calif., will take over the 1st Division post previously occupied by Brig. Gen. Merrill B. Twining, who is ill in a hospital.

Brig. Gen. William J. Scheyer, 52, former Assistant Director of Personnel at Marine Corps Headquarters, will succeed General Bare in the T&R Command.

Gen. Puller Receives Medal

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller, one of the most decorated Marine Corps officers, now has another medal to add to his collection which includes five Navy Crosses.

He has been awarded his third Air Medal for meritorious achievement in aerial flight while serving as assistant commander of the First Marine Division in Korea from 7 April to 17 May, last year. His citation stated that he had participated in daring flights in light, unarmed aircraft over an active combat area in the face of grave hazards in order to obtain information which later proved valuable in ground combat operations.

Recently commander of the Third Marine Division at Camp Pendleton, Calif., he assumed command of the Troop Training Unit, Amphibious Training Command, at Coronado, San Diego, Calif., this week.

Women Marine Uniform

A new summer uniform of dacron material will soon be adopted for use by the Women Marines.

Designed by Mainbocher, the uniform is a green and white two-piece outfit. Dacron, the nylon synthetic material of which it is made, is claimed to be washable, non-fading and will not stretch. It will be issued to Women Marines as current stocks of the old uniform are exhausted. Approximately three years will be required for the changeover to be completed, according to Col. Katherine Towle, Director of Women Marines.

Both officers and enlisted women will wear the same style dacron uniform. It consists of a dress, for working hours, and a coat style jacket of the same material, piped with green at the collar, cuffs and shoulder straps.

Also planned for the women is a new dress blue uniform. The color will be darker than the blue trousers worn by the men, but lighter than the coat worn by male Marines. Although there will be no red stripe on the skirt, the coat will be trimmed with scarlet and gold chevrons, gold buttons and scarlet edging. It will be worn with a white blouse and blue tie. The dress uniform will not be issued, however, until the Corps reissues dress blues to the men.

The hat worn by Marine Women will remain unchanged except for a new blue one for the dress uniform. "Scrambled eggs" will decorate the bill of the new dress blue hat for all women of field rank.

A fashion showing of the new uniforms is being planned for the Washington, D. C. area.

Program Open to Marines

The Marine Corps is inviting applications from enlisted personnel on active duty for assignment to flight training as Naval Aviation Cadets.

Marines formerly separated from the Aviation Cadet Program due to quota restrictions, or released to inactive duty from the program at the end of the war, are also eligible to apply provided they meet the requirements.

To be eligible, an applicant must be an American citizen and must have reached his 18th but not his 27th birthday at the time of applying. He must have completed at least two full academic years (60 semester hours or 90 quarter hours) toward a degree at an accredited college; or have satisfactorily completed one full year (30 semester hours or 45 quarter hours) of passing work at an accredited college or university, and attain a GCT score of 120 and a PA score of 116 on his Standard Classification tests.

Marines who have graduated from an accredited high school or secondary school, satisfactorily complete the USAFI college level General Education Development Tests, and have a GCT 120 and a PA 116 on the Standard Classification test, are also eligible.

All applicants must be unmarried and agree to remain unmarried until they win their wings and are commissioned. Marines accepted for the program are discharged from the Corps, enlisted as Naval Aviation Cadets and must agree to serve a total of four years on active duty. This includes approximately 18 months of flight training with the remainder of the time as a commissioned aviator with the operating forces of the Marine Corps or Navy.

Interested Marines may apply to their CO's for further information, using Joint Letter 52-164, Navy Department Bulletin, 31 March 1952 as reference for procedures to apply for the program.

All-Marine Rifle Shoot

The annual Marine rifle, pistol and trophy matches opened this week at Camp Lejeune, N. C., where more than 400 Marine marksmen gathered for the largest competitive Marine event of this kind in 52 years.

The matches will continue through 20 June, at which time awards will be made to the winners by Marine dignitaries, and 60 men will be named for participation in the National Shoots to be held in late August and early September. Those selected for the National competition will be trained at Parris Island, S. C., by Lt. Col. Kermit C. Zieg.

Fifth Marine Convention

The third annual convention of the Fifth Marine Division Association will be held at the Palmer House in Chicago on 27, 28 and 29 June.

Joseph B. Warren, president of the association, has announced that the convention will be the largest in the history of the "Spearhead" division group. A special program of shopping tours, fashion shows and sightseeing tours is planned for the wives of members attending.

Additional information may be obtained by writing Elliott R. Detchon, jr., Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample, Inc., 221 N. LaSalle St., Chicago 1, Ill.

To Command Fleet Oiler

Comdr. Duncan P. Dixon, jr., USN, was detached from duty at the U. S. Naval Academy this week and will assume command of the fleet oiler USS Chipola of the Atlantic Fleet. For the past three years he has been an instructor in the Academy's Department of Ordnance and Gunnery.

Court Rules On Two Retirement Cases

The U.S. Court of Claims ruled this week that a Marine Corps lieutenant colonel advanced to the rank of Colonel on the retired list as the result of a combat commendation and later recalled to active duty in that rank, is entitled to receive retired pay based on the higher rank.

Col. Adolph B. Miller, USMC (Ret.), the plaintiff, was retired on 1 Oct. 1942, after more than 30 years in the Marine Corps. Then serving as a lieutenant colonel, he was advanced to the rank of Colonel on the retired list by virtue of a combat commendation. Two months later he was recalled to active duty in his new rank and served in that rank until 26 Nov. 1944 when he was again retired.

Colonel Miller asked the Court to decide whether or not he was entitled to retired pay since that date based upon the rank of full colonel.

Cites Sec. Orders

Judge Evan Howell, who delivered the opinion of the Court, said, "When the plaintiff was recalled to active duty under competent orders, the Secretary of the Navy actually believed that he was recalling and did recall a full colonel to active duty and quite naturally the plaintiff believed that he was being recalled with that rank. Had the Secretary of the Navy anticipated in the least the controversy which is now before us, we believe that he would have issued plaintiff a temporary appointment as full colonel without hesitation."

At the time of Colonel Miller's recall, the Court said, the Services were issuing temporary appointments to large numbers of civilians without previous military training who possessed particular skills needed at that time in our preparedness program, and that "It would indeed produce an incongruous and absurd result for this court to construe the congressional enactments in such a way as to favor such a temporary appointee over a career member of the United States Marine Corps."

The Court ruled in favor of Colonel Miller and entry of judgment was suspended "to await the filing of a report from the General Accounting Office showing the amount due the plaintiff."

Proceed Time Not Allowed

In another decision, the Court ruled that "proceed time" may not be counted in computing service for retired pay purposes.

A retired Naval officer, Lt. Comdr. G. W. Danforth, who, according to the Navy, has 22 years, 11 months and nine days total service, had asked the Court to extend his total service to "over 23 years" by adding proceed time which the Navy had not counted.

Chief Judge Marvin Jones, who delivered the opinion of the Court, said the matter is one "of internal regulation and in the circumstances it is not within our province to intervene." He added that, "According to the regulations and practice of the Navy plaintiff was not entitled to proceed time in addition to actual travel time."

MEDICAL ROTC TRAINING

More than 1,500 members of Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps units at medical, dental, veterinary and pharmacy schools throughout the country will participate in professional and field training this summer at nine Army medical installations.

Navy Scholarship

The trustees of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y., are offering a full four year tuition scholarship to the son of a Naval or Marine Corps Regular or Reserve Officer, petty officer or noncommissioned officer on active duty or retired with pay, or to the sons of deceased personnel of the above categories. The student selected will be awarded free tuition amounting to $600 a year and will enter the Institute with the September 1952 class.

Candidates will be selected by a board of line and engineering officers convened in the Bureau of Naval Personnel and will be considered on the basis of scholarship, class standing, leadership qualities, and participation in extra-curricular activities. Only an exceptional student will be considered, and the successful candidate will be required to maintain an average grade of 85 percent, it was announced.

Application forms, to be completed by the applicant and the principal of the secondary school he last attended, may be secured from the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Washington, D. C. Applications to be considered must be completed and returned to the Bureau on or before 20 June 1952, the Navy said.

Steamship line, operating passenger ships between New York and South Africa, offers advantageous employment opportunities to qualified ship's surgeons. Pleasant and interesting voyage, modern well-equipped vessels, excellent living conditions, good salary. Applicants required to have medical degree, license to practice, and United States Coast Guard certificate of registration. Further requirements are pleasing personality, sobriety, ability to maintain good social relations with others. Must furnish testimonials as to character and professional qualifications. Address reply to Capt. G. T. Sullivan, Marine Superintendent, Farrell Lines, 26 Beaver Street, New York 4, New York.

Like many of the early statesmen who helped make America great, Senator Webster recognized failings that might endanger our country long after his own time.

Today America is strong and getting stronger. We have proved time and again that we can handle "external foes." But corruption in high places, and the resulting scandals, can do more harm than foreign aggression. If we are to remain the greatest of nations we must clean up our own back yard... rid ourselves of the parasites and incapable persons who do harm from within. Then and only then will all of us — labor, management and government alike — benefit from living and working in the United States. Then and only then can America work out its destiny.

Gen. McNarney Sees Great Strides in Aerial Weapons

A wedding of the guided missile and the airplane is not far distant, General Joseph T. McNarney, USAF-Ret., president of Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation, declared 28 May.

"We can no longer be satisfied," General McNarney said, "with the traditional evolution of aerial weapons. Fractional improvement — building a plane that flies a little higher, a little farther, and a little faster than previous models—is no longer good enough, for this type of development will never establish the technological margin over the enemy that is absolutely fundamental to our defense. Our foe is now at least abreast of us in this regard. We can move ahead of him only by thinking and planning in terms of truly revolutionary types of aerial weapons."

General McNarney spoke at the dedication of a new $3,000,000 Convair Engineering Development Center at San Diego. In attendance at the ceremony were 300 members of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces who were completing a two weeks' field course on the subject of mobilizing the nation's economy for full emergency.

General McNarney advised the engineers who will work in the 236,000 square feet of floor area in the new building to keep two things in mind:

1. Strive to make weapons cheaper while making them better and faster because there are neither unlimited resources with which to work nor are there unlimited dollars that can be diverted from our economy to prepare for war;
2. For the first time since America's industrial revolution military personnel must learn through modernized logistic methods to drastically curtail pipelines and stockages or face fighting without enough.

General McNarney predicted that "we are now only at the threshold of the true air age."

New propulsion methods and guidance systems, he said, will enable Convair engineers to design new types of aircraft with speeds measured in thousands of miles per hour.

"I can forecast from here that the day is not far distant," General McNarney remarked, "when the people in Convair Engineering Development Center will have accumulated all the necessary information to bring about a wedding of the guided missile and the airplane."

"When that day arrives, the building of interplanetary aircraft and of so-called 'satellite' aircraft will have become entirely practical and feasible."

"Indeed, considerable of the information we need to build such a ship is already at hand. Actually, some of the problems we are working on right now in the field of guided missiles for the Armed Forces are basically more difficult than the problem of building a space ship. If we can accomplish the former, and I assure you we will, then there is absolutely no reason why we can't also do the latter."

McNarney emphasized that achieving and maintaining technological superiority was more pronounced today than it was in the last war.

"The scientist, the manufacturer and the soldier are now partners, and indeed our survival in another war might well depend more on the scientist and the manufacturer than on the soldier," he added.

Mobile Unit Renamed

The 2061st Mobile Weather Squadron recently became the 31st Weather Squadron. The reorganization also included the transfer of several weather stations in Germany and France to the 31st from the 18th Weather Squadron.

U. S. AIR FORCE

Redesignate Air Base Gp.

The 2500th Air Base Group became the 2500th Air Base Wing, effective 1 June. Col. Louis M. Merrick, commanding, has announced. The Wing will maintain and operate facilities for units at Mitchel AFB, N. Y., including Headquarters Continental Air Command, Headquarters First Air Force and the 514th Troop Carrier Wing.

Officers of the Wing under the reorganization are as follows: Deputy Commanding Officer, Col. William P. Mullins; Public Information Officer, Maj. John B. Barron; Surgeon, Lt. Col. Bascom Bogle; Air Installations Officer, Lt. Col. Ben D. DeJohn; Air Inspector, Maj. Henry P. Julliard; Legal and Claims Officer, Lt. Boston W. Smith; Adjutant, Capt. Paul E. McDermott; Air Provost Marshal, Capt. Owen J. Baggett; Deputy for Comptroller, Col. John B. Wilson; Deputy for Personnel, Col. Jacob A. Herrman; Deputy for Operations, Maj. Robert W. Muir; Deputy for Materiel, Col. Theodore Gengarely.

The three groups under the Wing organization are: Air Base Group, commanded by Maj. Francis E. Dubisher; Medical Group commanded by Lt. Col. Bascom Bogle, and M&S Group commanded by Col. Jerome E. Aertgoerts.

New CEI Manual

Maj. Gen. Raymond C. Maude, Director of Communications, DCS/Operations, at USAF, has alerted the field to a forthcoming consolidated publication of USAF Communications-Electronics Instructions (CEI).

The CEI volume will encompass within one file drawer a spread of instructions covering every facet of the C-E art. Broken into five major sections, the CEI, in 3,500 printed pages, will treat communications-electronics doctrine, procedures, systems, planning and equipment for field specialists down to Wing level.

The publication is a two-year product of the Manuals Branch of the Electronics Division at the Air University at Maxwell AFB, Ala. It was guided to completion by Col. Lawrence C. Sheetz, Electronics Chief there, and Lt. Col. W. T. Jenkins, who heads the Manuals Branch for the Air Command and Staff School at Maxwell.

PX Operations Director

Lt. Col. H. H. Chalfont, USAF, formerly San Antonio Regional Officer, has been appointed Director of Operations at the Headquarters of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, it is announced by Brig. Gen. Edward H. White, Chief, Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

As San Antonio Regional Officer, Colonel Chalfont supervised and advised all Army and Air Force Exchanges in Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas. He held this position since 20 Oct. 1948.

As Director of Operations at Hq A&AFES, Colonel Chalfont will direct the supervision of operations activities and programs in all regional offices and domestic exchanges.

Weather Wing Deactivated

The 2059th Air Weather Wing, with headquarters at Tinker Air Force Base for many years, was deactivated on 1 June it was announced by Maj. Gen. W. O. Senter, Commanding General of the Air Weather Service at Andrews Air Force Base, in Washington, D. C.

Widely known under its old designation of "Continental Weather Wing," the organization will be dissolved as the final step in a functional reorganization of Air Weather Service units in the United States.

General Senter's statement noted that the Severe Weather Warning Center will remain at Tinker. Under the direction of Lt. Col. E. J. Fawbush and Maj. Robert C. Miller, the "Storm Warning Center" has become familiar to Oklahomans due to its key role in tornado and high wind forecasting.

The 2060th Mobile Weather Squadron, of which the Severe Weather Warning Center is a part, also will remain at Tinker. The squadron will be redesignated as the Sixth Weather Squadron, and will be under the command of Lt. Col. William Barney.

Under the functional reorganization, each major Air Force command in the United States will be serviced by its own Air Weather Service group, although the Air Weather Service will remain a component of the Military Air Transport Service.

Concurrent with the deactivation of the 2059th Air Weather Wing, three new weather groups appeared. Personnel from the deactivated wing will be widely used in manning these units. The Sixth Air Weather Wing Group will support the Air Materiel Command from Wright-Patterson, AFB, Ohio. The Eighth Air Weather Group will support the Air Training Command from Scott AFB, Ill. The Ninth Air Weather Group will support MATS from Andrews AFB, Washington, DC.

Gen. Vandenberg Improving

The Defense Department said this week that General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, is now "able to be up and around" and that his convalescence "is progressing satisfactorily."

General Vandenberg was operated on last month for an abdominal disorder, and is now recuperating at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, where both Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter and General Nathan F. Twining consulted with him this week on Air Force matters.

Degree for JAG Officer

Lt. Col. Walter Klechel, jr., USAF, was awarded the degree of Doctor of Juridical Science by the George Washington University Law School at the annual commencement at Washington, D. C., on 28 May.

Colonel Klechel is assigned to the Office of The Judge Advocate General, U. S. Air Force, where he is a member of a Board of Review. He holds the Bachelor of Laws degree from Yale Law School and Master of Laws from George Washington Law School, as well as A.B. from the University of Nebraska; he is a member of the Bars of Supreme Court of the United States, Supreme Court of Nebraska, and the United States Court of Military Appeals.

AF Medics Help Army

Under a Joint Army and Air Force Staffing plan, a new squadron from San Antonio's Lackland Air Force base is helping to carry out the important teaching job of the Army's Medical Field Service School at Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. They are the officers and airmen of the 3723d Training Squadron, activated 1 May at the Lackland Air Force base hospital.

The squadron operates on detached service. Its members take whatever assignments will best fit into the overall functioning of the Service School. There is little regard for what branch of service is represented, but considerable emphasis on the qualifications and capabilities of the individual members.

One of the Air Force officers, Maj. Joseph E. Tower, has been handed the job commanding the Army school's Fourth Battalion, while another, 1st Lt. Willis M. Slott, functions as C.O. of the battalion's Company B.

Recently the Army's Fourth Battalion awarded a handsome plaque to the men of the 3273d Squadron for achieving the highest quota of individual savings deposits and blood donations in the school.

Honor Gen. Goddard

Brig. Gen. George W. Goddard, USAF, was presented the honorary degree of Doctor of Science by Boston University at ceremonies held 2 June. The citation read:

"George W. Goddard, Brigadier General, pioneer and leader in aerial photography, recipient of degrees and awards by private photographic societies, the Government of this Nation and of France, and colleagues in all phases of aerial reconnaissance, you have held to your vision in spite of great opposition, have endorsed Boston University's research in aerial photography, and have seen your theories become established procedures. —I confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Science."

TAC Hq. Staff

General John K. Cannon has announced three major changes in his Tactical Air Command headquarters staff at Langley AFB, Va.

He named Col. James B. Tipton, just returned from Korea, assistant deputy chief of staff for operations; Col. Ben A. Garland, who recently completed a course at the Air War College, chief of the troop carrier division, and Lt. Col. Ruth M. Downey, formerly with Headquarters, USAF, in Washington, WAF staff advisor.

Dhahran Reunion

A gala get-together of all personnel who have served at MATS Dhahran Airfield, Saudi Arabia, will be held at the Andrews AFB Officers Club on 20 June.

Dinner will be served at 2000 hours and will be preceded by a small "Let's Get Re-Acquainted" gathering. Former Arabian Knights interested in the reunion should contact Miss Rose Palermo, 7613 Atwood St., S.E., Washington, D. C., or Nancy Griffith, 309 Parkland Pl., S.E., Washington, D. C. Phone: Johnson 20026, no later than 17 June.

Air Force Band's Birthday

The U. S. Air Force Band, Col. George S. Howard, conductor, will observe the 10 anniversary of its inception on Sunday, 8 June.

First organized at Bolling AFB, Washington, D. C. by Lt. Col. Alf Heiberg, (then Warrant Officer) it is the official musical representative of the U. S. Air Force. Composed of 100 instrumentalists, the unit was formed from a nucleus of a quartet of saxophone players.

It has played in person to a heterogeneous 7,000,000 people on three continents.

Radio wise, the USAF Band is one of the mainstays in the Air Force recruiting program. Radio networks, both AM and FM, donate approximately three and one half million dollars worth of time annually as a public service. Through American broadcasting networks, the British Broadcasting Company, the Armed Forces Radio Service, and the Voice of America, the series of programs produced by the band reach 40 million people weekly.

Sets Bond Purchase Record

The Treasury Department has announced that the 832d AF Specialized Depot located at Topeka, Kans., has achieved an outstanding record in that it was the only Air Force installation able to maintain a better than 90 per cent average monthly participation over a three-year period in the purchase of Defense Bonds.

Appoint Former AC Pilot

Lowery L. Brabham has been appointed sales manager for Republic Aviation Corporation, Mundy I. Peale, president, announced this week. Mr. Brabham, formerly director of military requirements for Republic, joined the company as an experimental test pilot in 1940. A native of Alabama, he got his wings at Kelly Field, Tex., and after a tour of duty in the Army Air Corps, became a commercial pilot.

"We have got to pay the cost to prevent a world war—or we will surely have to pay the immensely greater cost of fighting one."—PRESIDENT TRUMAN.

Show 'Em Who Is Boss! It is highly satisfying to note that Brig. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner, USA, new commander of the Koje Island prison camps in Korea, has proceeded with firmness, dispatch, and efficiency to restore order and discipline in the compounds heretofore ruled by recalcitrant Red prisoners of war. For weeks, perhaps even months, Communist prisoners of war in some of the enclosures openly defied the military authorities, apparently with immunity from punishment. The prison guards leaned far backwards in observing the Geneva convention on treatment of prisoners, and hoped through indulgence and kindness to impress on the captives the difference between the free world and the harsh rule of Communism. Possibly this attitude was appreciated by many of the anti-Communists among the prisoners, and may have been the deciding factor in influencing them to oppose return to Communist control.

However, the effect on the hard core of Communists among the prisoners, was the exact opposite. These Reds construed kindness as an evidence of weakness and were prompt to take advantage of the situation. Under the direction of political commissars among the prisoners they tortured and murdered non-Communist captives, flew Communist flags, hung out insulting signs and banners, improvised weapons, disobeyed orders with impunity, and climaxed their defiance by kidnapping the former camp commander, demanding and receiving concessions as the price of his release.

Such a situation was intolerable. The new camp commander sent troops, with armor, riot guns, and tear gas, into the compounds, tore down the offending flags, banners and signs, freed non-Communist prisoners sentenced to death by Red Kangaroo courts, and removed some of the leaders of the prison uprisings. This was something the Reds could understand. As was to be expected they offered little or no resistance, and now may be expected to obey orders and recognize the authority of their captors. The military commanders in Korea are to be warmly congratulated on this forceful, though belated, action.

Combat Pay. As the political conventions approach and the pressure for recessing Congress increases, the chances dwindle for enactment of the bill to authorize combat pay for the officers and enlisted men actually facing the enemy in Korea. This is doubly unfortunate in that it is virtually certain that if the measure should be brought to a vote in either house it would be approved. The Senate approved a $45 a month combat pay when it passed the cost-of-living pay increase, but the provision was dropped in conference on the assurance of the House conferees that they would take the measure up separately. But they have not made any move to consider it, the excuse being that they must give their time to other measures (they are now considering the public works program). Meanwhile, in the other house, Senators Blair Moody, A. S. (Mike) Monroney, and John J. Sparkman have petitioned Senator Richard B. Russell, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, to take up the matter again, declaring that "men in the fox-holes can't wait."

The combat pay proposal has been before Congress since January of 1951—a total of 18 months. There have been some comments that it would be difficult to administer and some charges that it would be subject to abuse, but no one has spoken out against the principle of including actual combat against an armed enemy with the nine exist-

Retirement Rights Cut

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I am certain that the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiles all those figures on the cost-of-living, doesn't have a single expert who could devise a way for covering a minimum 10 per cent increase in the "CofL," with the 4 per cent pay increase voted for those of us on the retired list. You've been carrying articles and letters concerning what's happening to the career officer. Why not give some space to the fact that retirement benefits are being curtailed.

Out here in California there are thousands of retired military personnel. I hope they and others throughout the country will join me in letting members of Congress know our thoughts about this 4 per cent increase. Now that we're not on active duty, our votes have a way of carrying greater influence.

Damage to Careers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your article on "Actions Against Career Officers" is in my opinion most commendable and deserves firm support and comment in your Readers Views plus definite and corrective action by the legislative bodies of our government, not at these gentlemen's leisure, now running our Army down the hill of inefficiency.

I attribute the decline mainly to the upper and lower houses and the over-selling job done by the Army through recruiting advertising. I served briefly in the Recruiting Service in 1946 and 1947 and because in that program I could see many fallacies I requested the only transfer of my Army career and got it pronto.

Coupled with other factors are the continuous changes of assignments long tours of duty in isolated areas, enormous expense in moving and uncertainty of position in connection with housing and living conditions which definitely lend to the unattractiveness of an Army career.

CWO, USA

Shortchanging the Retired

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

This is written on behalf of the many retired service personnel with whom I have talked and who live in this general vicinity. We wish to correct the misinformation that has been so widely broadcast by press and radio to the effect that retired personnel received a four per cent increase.

The base pay on which retirement pay is figured was raised 4% but in view of the fact the maximum retirement percentage is 75% the most anyone could receive is 75% of the 4% increase and that is further reduced by withheld taxes.

Further may it be noted large numbers of retired personnel draw much less than the maximum 75%.

In short what they actually get the large family of weapons growing out of it, guided missiles, and threats of biological and bacteriological warfare.

Many of the new graduates already have seen combat service before entry into the Academies. The others will absorb from their older comrades the lessons of World War II and Korea. Conversely, they will bring to the services a fresh vigor and the courageous enthusiasm of youth. As the years go on, more and more of the responsibility for the nation's security and defense will pass to their shoulders.

The Services and the nation welcome them with the full confidence born of the glorious record of those who have graduated before them. With the support of the people and the Congress, they will join the thousands of patriotic men and women now with the active forces and the reserves to keep the peace, or if world war should come, to assure victory.

A check of the voting potential of retired personnel might give some elective officials food for thought.

It might also be noted that this so called raise is merely restoration in part of the many pay cuts which both active and retired have taken over the last five years.

Hitting Career Men

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I heartily agree with "Air Force Wife" that it would be well to let the public know—through newspapers, radio and television—how, in this era of constantly rising living costs, Congress has enacted laws which have harmed the morale of our career servicemen as outlined in your article, "Services Feel Effects of Actions Against Career Officers."

I suggest that your article be reprinted in national magazines at an early date.

Servicemen's wives can help by pointing out the facts in letters to the editors of their local newspapers. Letters to Congressmen and Senators will also help, especially if they come from many servicemen's wives in each area.

THERESA E. ALEXANDER

The upheaval within the POW enclosures at Koje have brought editorial demands that a tougher policy be instigated, and approval of the demotion of Generals Dodd and Colson.

The only good news to come from the blunder, states the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard Times, "is the apparent determination to put an end to the 'soft' prisoner policy which the UN has been pursuing."

In Rochester, N. Y., the Times Union notes that the Geneva Convention requires humane treatment of prisoners, "But it requires also of prisoners that they be obedient and disciplined. It is time to stop coddling these fanatics."

The Atlanta Constitution says "We Americans are humane, yes, but at the same time we can be tough. We must convince the Communist world that we are both."

"An explanation of the blunder," disciplinary action for those responsible and an end to the coddling, says the Milwaukee Journal, "still won't entirely undo the damage."

Four papers in widely-separated areas agree. The Seattle Times says "American arms have seldom, if ever, been placed in a more humiliating position."

The Jacksonville Journal says the episode "is the best propaganda weapon the Reds have had in a long time and they, experts that they are, will exploit it to the hilt."

What He Understands
Bimrose in The Portland Oregonian

The Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press says, "Careless words and inept propagandists have offset victories won on the field at bloody cost."

The Mobile (Ala.) Press adds, "This boner has cost the U. S. plenty in prestige."

Asking how the prisoners knew so much about the negotiations at Panmunjom, the Columbus (Ohio) Citizen says, "Obviously, the seizure of Gen. Dodd was planned elsewhere—in Korea, China or Russia."

The Greensboro (N. C.) News also believes "The whole thing was a planned propaganda maneuver by the Reds."

The New York World Telegram-Sun declares that

"The profession of arms is a tough business and those who cannot measure up to its demands should stand aside." Thus, the paper says, the demotions of Dodd and Colson were "in order in both cases."

Admitting "it is difficult to try to abide by rules in dealing with people who have no rules," the Providence (R. I.) Journal says, "By this time we should be familiar with Communist techniques."

Red Negotiators Charged with Koje Riots

AFTER visiting the Koje Island prison camps in Korea this week General Mark W. Clark, USA, Commander-in-Chief of United Nations Forces in Korea, said he was convinced that the Communist truce negotiators had directed the recent uprisings and disobedience of Red prisoners of war held by the Allies. At the same time he declared "the maximum amount of force will be used to make rebellious prisoners obey orders."

The general indicated his satisfaction with the progress being made by Brig. Gen. Haydon L. Boatner, USA, the new camp commander, in restoring order within the compounds. Most of the prison camps were calm this week but it was necessary to send troops into some of the enclosures to suppress disorders and to destroy Communist flags and insulting signs. There were some clashes with resultant casualties among the prisoners.

Allied tanks and infantry, armed with flame throwers and tear gas, entered some of the more disorderly camps and tore down Communist flags and signs displayed by defiant prisoners. For the most part these operations were conducted without the use of force, the Communists offering little or no resistance. On one occasion a South Korean officer fired at a jeering prisoner, wounding him in the leg. The accidental discharge of a machine gun resulted in the death of a prisoner. Several other Reds were wounded when guards were forced to use riot guns. In one camp several prisoners were found with their hands bound. These were non-Communists who reportedly had been sentenced to death by a Red kangaroo court.

AT THE TRUCE CONFERENCE at Panmunjom daily sessions were held this week, but no progress was made toward achieving an armistice. In view of the long stalemate United Nations delegates suggested an indefinite recess of negotiations, but the Reds objected, and the Allies reluctantly consented to continue the fruitless daily meetings. The Communist representatives this week reiterated their charges of mistreatment of prisoners by the Allies, but their recriminations were somewhat less bitter than heretofore.

North Korean General Nam Il, chief Communist delegate, attempted to use General Matthew Ridgway's statements to Congressional committees to support a charge that the United States planned to turn over Red prisoners to Chinese Nationalists. What General Ridgway said to the committees was that some consideration had at first been given to transferring some of the more recalcitrant war prisoners to Okinawa, or possibly to the United States, but it was decided not to do so. Nothing was said by the general to warrant the assumption that there was any thought of turning them over to the Chinese Nationalists.

Nam Il ridiculed the accuracy of the Allied screening process, which disclosed that nearly half of the Red military prisoners and most of the interned civilians would forcibly resist return to Communist control. However, the North Korean delegate rejected the renewed suggestion of Maj. Gen. Wm. K. Harrison, Jr., chief United Nations representative, that the Reds accept a rescreening by a neutral commission, or by a joint board, on which the Chinese Communists and North Koreans would be represented.

UNITED NATIONS LEADERS are greatly concerned over a domestic situation in South Korea that threatens the political stability of that country. President Syngman Rhee has declared martial law in Pusan and has caused the arrest of a dozen members of the National Assembly on charges of complicity in the murder of a Korean army captain and of collaboration with Communists. Other deputies are in hiding to avoid arrest. There was a report that the president had planned to dissolve parliament in order to prevent the election of a new president scheduled for this month.

President Truman this week sent a sharp note to Rhee, expressing his shock and amazement at the actions taken or proposed by the Korean president. Mr. Truman pointed out that the intervention of United Nations members into the Korean war was for the purpose of preserving democracy, and that they could not condone autocratic and dictatorial actions. Similar diplomatic protests were made by Great Britain and Australia. It is understood that as a result the aging Korean president changed his mind about suspending parliament. However, his attitude toward opposition deputies remains obdurate. American Ambassador John J. Muccio, who had come to the United States for an extended leave, hastily flew back to Korea after only a few days in this country. Prior to leaving he conferred with President Truman and presumably will make very strong representations in behalf of the United States and the other countries participating in the Korea war.

The fear that the Korean domestic crisis might have an adverse effect on the military effort was evidenced by a visit of General Clark to President Rhee. The latter is understood to have assured the United Nations commander that he would not withdraw any South Korean military units from the front in order to enforce the decree of martial law at Pusan.

CHARGES THAT COMMUNIST CHINA is using slave labor will be placed before a special United Nations committee by the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. The committee will examine documentary evidence, and later will hear witnesses in closed sessions. It hopes to present its findings on these accusations and on similar charges against other Communist countries to the Economic and Social Council next March.

At a meeting of the United Nations Disarmament Council this week Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik said that Russia would not consent to consideration of a western proposal for reduction of the size of armed forces unless Red China were admitted to the conference considering the matter. The western powers had proposed that the United States, Soviet Russia and China be each limited to an armed strength of 1.5 million men, and that the armed forces of Great Britain and France be restricted to 800,000 each. There would appear to be no probability that Russia would agree to the proposal under any circumstances, but is embracing the opportunity to try to bring Red China into the United Nations through a side door.

Trouble among the top Communists of Romania is evident from the announcement of the dismissal of Foreign Minister Ana Pauker from the Politburo in that country. She is regarded as the world's foremost woman Communist, and is reputed to be a close friend of Joseph Stalin. She is officially accused of "rightist deviation," which apparently means that she failed to guess right as to the current party line. For the present she retains the post of foreign minister, but it is probable that she will soon be on the way out.

NATO's Submarine and Air Defenses

ADMIRAL Lynde D. McCormick returned this week to Norfolk from his second trip to Europe in the capacity of Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic, following conferences which, it is easy to assume, were related to the overwhelming requirement he mentioned after the conclusion of his recent introductory tour to the capitals of the ten nations in SACLANT.

That requirement, of course, is for a fuller degree of implementation of the plans for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Atlantic operations. The present deficiencies in necessary defenses against enemy submarines and aircraft are notorious, and under most favorable conditions there is bound to be a long time-lag before such deficiencies can be corrected.

Admiral McCormick's trip was a nine-day affair, timed so as to permit attendance at the change-over of the Supreme Command Europe (coordinate with SACLANT) from General Eisenhower to General Ridgway, and to permit NATO's present two supreme area commanders to confer on the orientation and coordination of their intimately related tasks. That coordination will have its first practical test, by the way, in the Autumn when there will be North Sea exercises employing large elements of both SACLANT and SACEUR.

Prior to the 30 May ceremony at SHAPE, Admiral McCormick had a day of conference with Lord Ismay, Secretary General of NATO, at the new Paris headquarters, and another with French defense officials on the particular problems of the Atlantic Command. Thereafter he had a day in London for consultation not only with the American naval officers in that city but with his SACLANT lieutenants, Admiral Sir George E. Creasy and Air Marshal Sir Alick Stevens of the Eastern Atlantic area.

There is no capital in western Europe which is incurious about political events in the United States, so closely are American political decisions linked with American military policies, including foreign aid. For this reason, quite as much as out of affection for a valued friend of the Allied armies, there is acute European interest in the reception accorded General Eisenhower this past week and in his comprehensive observations on policies and procedures in Europe. The lively press interview at the Pentagon on Monday elicited helpful remarks on the west's strength as a product—rather than a sum—of three factors, spiritual, economic, and military, each of which would have to be maintained at its proper height for an equilibrium in preparedness, and none of which could sink to zero without converting the whole product to zero. This is a singularly simple statement of a tremendous fact, which nobody has better expressed. It is interesting to note that within 24 hours the House Appropriations subcommittee (which recently had its large part in reduction of the budgetary requests) was inviting General Eisenhower to present his views. A good deal may be salvaged, even in an election year, from the scramble of legislation.

Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter is on a hurried visit to the United Kingdom, possibly in connection with the recent assignment there of the 49th Air Division, the fighter-bomber wing of which is already arrived. It is assumed that members of the Tactical Air Command in France will meet him in England. In that connection it may be noted that Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, Commanding U. S. Air Forces in Europe, was this week nominated General.

It is pleasant to note that the French Reds considerably overreached in their effort to take advantage of the change at SHAPE. Their "demonstration" against General Ridgway had been so loudly advertised that the U. S. Naval Academy—Members of the Academy's Midshipman Boat Club recently held their final Spring dinner at Bancroft Hall, during which the Battalion Plaque was awarded to the Fifth Battalion, and the C. Sherman Hoyt prizes were awarded to the midshipman winners of the perpetual Holloway, McMillan and Admiral DuBose Trophies. The three Hoyt cups went to Midshipman Second Class Robert A. Schaller, Midshipman First Class Joseph W. Sherar, and Midshipman Samuel B. Walker. Midshipman First Class Martin Kunze accepted the Battalion Plaque from Comdr. E. Arthur Shuman, Academy Sailing Officer. Midshipman Third Class Joseph A. Walsh received the Excellency Pennant for his leadership and contributions to his battalion's victory in sailing.

Two professors, James N. Galloway, Senior Professor in the Mathematics Department, and John Tyler, Professor of Mathematics, will retire on 30 June after 36 years of service.

Memorial Day observances by the Severn River Naval Command included the 22d annual "Poppy Anchor" ceremony.

More than one third of this year's graduating class were former enlisted men. A total of 278 of the 783 Midshipmen in the Class of 1952 had prior military service. Included in the number are 262 former enlisted men, four former officers, seven former NROTC midshipmen, four naval aviation cadets and one former West Point cadet. By services, the numbers were: Navy—205, Army—13, Marine Corps—56, Air Force—3, and Coast Guard—1.

Col. Foss on Inactive Status—Col. Joseph J. Foss was separated from active duty with the Air Force and was returned to his civilian status, effective 31 May. This announcement was made by Headquarters Central Air Defense Force, Kansas City, Mo.

Colonel Foss holds the Congressional Medal of Honor awarded to him for outstanding action above and beyond the call of duty while a fighter pilot in the U. S. Marine Corps in World War II. He returned to active duty in March 1951 at his own request and his separation from the service is being granted at his request. This is one of the provisos which holders of the nation's highest military award may exercise.

Colonel Foss' last duty assignment prior to release from active duty was as Tactical Inspector with the Inspector General's section of the Central Air Defense Force. Officers of that headquarters honored the colonel with a luncheon on 27 May.

Train-Riding MP's—The Army's squads of train-riding military police charged with surveillance over the thousands of soldiers, airmen and sailors who travel on leave or in line of duty in the seven States of the Second Army Area and District of Columbia, picked up 97 "AWOLS" during the month of April.

A report compiled by the Second Army Provost Marshal shows that during April the train-riding MP's patrolled a total of 1,360 trains and supervised troop movements in 33 stations and terminals. The Armed Forces travel load for the month was 192,846, of which 109,656 were soldiers; 47,935, sailors and 35,255, airmen. Eighty-two of the 97 "AWOLS" were Army men, nine were from the Navy, and six from the Air Force.

By agreement between the Armed Forces and in line with the principle of unification, the Army military police perform the train-riding mission for all the military services.

British Marine Commandant—Maj. Gen. J. C. Westall, C.B.E., has been promoted to Lieutenant General, and has succeeded General Sir Leslie C. Hollis, K.C.B., K.B.E., as Commandant General of the British Royal Marines. Earlier, THE JOURNAL stated that the appointment would go to Maj. Gen. H. T. Tollemache, C.B., C.B.E., but the Admiralty announced that his appointment was cancelled because of ill health.

Honor Navy Surgeon General—Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, MC, USN, Surgeon General of the Navy was honored recently by the American Foundation for Tropical Diseases when he received notification that the Foundation had again elected him as an Honorary Director for the year 1952. Admiral Pugh, one of five honorary directors, was similarly honored by the Foundation in 1951.

New EUCOM Chief of Finance—Col. Leonard H. Sims, Sixth Army Finance Officer at San Francisco since 1948, has taken over new duties as Chief of the EUCOM Finance Division in Heidelberg, Germany. He succeeds Col. Ernest D. Lee, chief of Division since March, 1951, assigned to Ft. Monroe, Va.

Veterinary Veteran Retires—Col. James R. Sperry, VC, Third Army Veterinarian stationed at Fort McPherson, Ga., has retired after 35 years of service with the Army Veterinary Corps. During World War II he served with the Ninth and Third Armies and as Chief Veterinarian of the European Theater.

John Paul Jones Graduates—One of the most famous names in Navy history is again on the list of Navy officers, with the commissioning on Friday at the Naval Academy of Ensign John Paul Jones. No relation to the father of the U. S. Navy, Ensign Jones got his name simply because his own father "liked the sound" of it. He only hopes he can be "half the officer and seaman" the original John Paul Jones was. Young Jones will begin his career aboard the carrier Monterey, far more modern and better equipped for her day than was the clumsy, leaky Bon Homme Richard on which the earlier Jones sailed to victory during the Revolution.

Attend AMA Sessions—Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, MC, Army Surgeon General, and five high-ranking members of his staff will attend the annual convention of the American Medical Association scheduled to open 9 June in Chicago.

Staff members who will attend the sessions include Brig. Gen. Silas B. Hays, MC, Deputy Surgeon General; Col. Floyd L. Wergeland, MC, Chief of the Education and Training Division; Col. Paul Hayes, MC, Chief Medical Consultant to the Surgeon General; Col. James B. Mason, MC, Special Assistant to the Surgeon General for Reserve Affairs, and Lt. Col. Hensley S. Johnson, MC, Assistant Chief Medical Consultant.

To Journal Readers

...In its decision on the STEEL case, the US Supreme Court sanctioned one change in the Constitution by referring to the President as the COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE ARMED FORCES. The Constitution says that "the President shall be Commander in Chief of the ARMY AND NAVY." Upon enactment of the National Security Act of 1947 there was some discussion as to the position of the newly created AIR FORCE in relation to the President's CinC powers. The President resolved this by thereafter referring to himself as CinC of the Armed Forces—a title to which the Supreme Court now gives judicial recognition.

...193 members of the Naval Academy class were commissioned THREE DAYS ahead of their 578 classmates! These were the midshipmen who were going into the Air Force instead of the Navy or Marine Corps and they were commissioned on 3 June instead of 6 June so that they would rank with the West Point Air Force grads who were commissioned with their class on 3 June. The AIR FORCE asked for this procedure so that all their new officers would rank from the same date.

...The Chamber of Commerce of the US, which recently reversed its stand from FOR to AGAINST UMT, has now started a referendum to determine its members' views on methods of meeting military manpower needs. The Chamber's present view is to rely first on voluntary recruitment, supplementing it with Selective Service when additional manpower is needed. Background pro and con arguments sent to members with their ballots were compiled by the Chamber's Special Committee on Armed Forces Manpower instead of by its standing Committee on NATIONAL DEFENSE which sponsored the Chamber's original stand in favor of UMT.

...The Defense Department this week asked Congress to let the Secretary set the effective date of the retirement of those adjudged disabled instead of having such RETIREMENTS follow the general law of becoming effective the first of the month following the order. The Department claims that it would SAVE up to 30 days difference between retired and active duty pay. The law setting the first of the month for retirements was enacted in 1930 on the plea that it would SIMPLIFY administration and bookkeeping.

Marine Pilots at Front—Flight leaders from Marine air squadrons are "visiting" front line positions of the First Marine Division in Korea. The program, which Marine Corps Schools call "terrain appreciation," helps the pilots improve their close air support activities by giving them a better understanding of what is taking place on the ground. During their tour on the battlefield, the aviators also get a good look at the enemy by flying over the lines in slow-moving observation planes.

Army Nurse Corps—Col. Ruby F. Bryant, Chief of the Army Nurse Corps, has returned to Washington following a six-week tour of U. S. Army medical installations in Europe. She reported high morale among Army nurses on duty there and praised their "splendid contribution to the medical service."

"Today our Army Nurse Corps officers in Europe are more important and indispensable than ever, for the men who defend American security must be assured that doctors and nurses stand ready with their professional skills when needed," Colonel Bryant declared.

Colonel Bryant expects to be in Washington until 15 June when she goes to Atlantic City, N. J., to attend the biennial convention of the American Nurses Association.

Canada Ships NATO Supplies—Canada is shipping 72 25-pounder guns with full equipment and 144 artillery trailers to Italy early this month under the NATO mutual aid plan, it was announced this week by Defense Minister Brooke Claxton. The shipment, to be loaded in Montreal, will be sent to the Port of Naples. In April, Canada sent shipments of arms and military equipment to France, Italy, and the Netherlands.

Reduce Time for Navy Aviators—Because of the petroleum shortage, the Navy has reduced its minimum flying requirements for fiscal '52 to 80 hours, including 12 hours night time. At the same time, the instrument qualification date for Naval aviators was extended to 31 Dec. 1952. Pilots detailed to flight status during the fiscal year are required to "obtain time proportional to period in flight status," the Navy said.

Selected for Retention

Two hundred and forty-three officers have been selected for retention as permanent officers in the U. S. Navy.

The selection boards considered officers commissioned in the Regular Navy from Aviation-Midshipman status during 1951, and from NROTC and college graduate sources during 1949 who applied for retention.

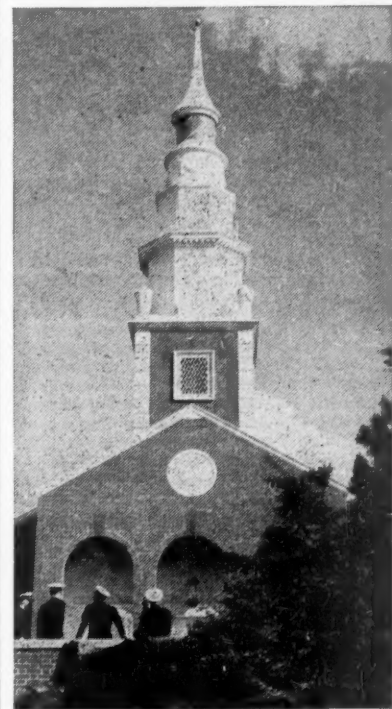

Officers who applied for retention during the period of 1 July 1951 to 1 April 1952 and who were not selected for the Regular Navy will be transferred to the Naval Reserve by 30 June 1952 and retained on active duty subject to release from active duty under the officer release program previously announced.

The new Coast Guard Memorial Chapel at New London, Conn., which was dedicated yesterday, 6 June

Coast Guard

THE new U. S. Coast Guard Memorial Chapel was dedicated 6 June at New London, Conn., in connection with the Coast Guard Academy commencement exercises. The chapel is on the Academy grounds.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder was the main speaker at the unveiling of the half-million-dollar chapel which was built by public contributions.

Former Under Secretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell, national committee chairman of the fund drive, made the speech of presentation. Vice Adm. Merlin O'Neill, Coast Guard Commandant, delivered the acceptance speech.

The chapel, which is open to all religious faiths, is "Dedicated to the heroic and valiant members of the United States Coast Guard who have sacrificed their lives in the performance of duty in peace and in war."

POSTS AND STATIONS

■ FT. KNOX, KY. A review honoring Col. Thomas D. Roberts, departing Assistant Commandant of The Armored School, was held here last Saturday morning with troops of the Armor Officer Candidate Detachment participating. Col. Roberts, assistant commandant since July, 1950, leaves early next week to assume duties as a member of the Joint Army Military Advisory Group with headquarters in London, England.

The Armored School's new assistant commandant will be Brig. Gen. Robert L. Howze, Jr. who recently completed a tour with the Office of the Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Army, Caribbean, in the Canal Zone.

Another important change in the staff and faculty of The Armored School occurred recently when Col. John K. Sells assumed duties as director of instruction, replacing Col. Logan C. Berry whose new assignment is the Army Language School at Monterey, Calif. Col. Sells' last assignment was with the Military Advisory Group in Greece.

■ YOKOHAMA, JAPAN. The Transportation Corps Women's Club, held their first meeting on 28 May at The New Grand Hotel officers mess.

Mrs. Frederick E. Bruhn was elected President; Mrs. Warren Hamill, Vice President; and Mrs. Robert C. Spiedel, Jr., Chairman of the Finance Committee. Meetings are to be held the last Wednesday of each month.

■ HQ., NORTHEAST AIR COMMAND. Col. James H. Brewster, Jr., commanding officer of McAndrew AF Base, will leave soon for Washington, D. C., and his new assignment as Executive Officer to the Deputy Inspector General at USAF Headquarters. Leaving with him will be Mrs. Brewster and their sons, James H. III, 14, and Frank L., 8.

Arriving in Newfoundland in June, 1948, Colonel Brewster was assigned first as Deputy Chief of Staff and later Chief of Staff of the former Newfoundland Base Command, headquartered at Peppercell AFB. In May, 1950, he was appointed Commanding Officer of McAndrew AFB.

■ FT. LESLEY J. MCNAIR, D. C. The last Post Ladies' luncheon of the season was an Aloha luncheon held at the Officers' Club Thursday. The hostesses, Mrs. O. V. Harold and Mrs. W. M. Burgess were hohumus, a native Hawaiian dress. The tables were decorated in typical Hawaiian fashion with leis, Hibiscus, and Woodroses. Mrs. Lesley J. McNair, widow of General Lesley J. McNair for whom the post was named, was an honor guest.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Frank E. Ball entertained at a dinner party in their quarters last Thursday for 16 guests.

Miss Patricia McAuliffe, daughter of Lt. Gen. and Mrs. A. C. McAuliffe entertained at a dessert bridge Tuesday in honor of Mrs. J. A. Ball, who with Capt. Ball is leaving Fort McNair for their new assignment in Trieste.

Mrs. R. R. Burr entertained the Altar Society Wednesday at a luncheon in her quarters in honor of Mrs. J. A. Ball. Guests also included Mrs. J. L. Throckmorton, Mrs. W. M. Burgess, Mrs. R. W. Fleming, Mrs. G. E. Abbott and Mrs. Ida Smith.

■ FT. MCLELLAN, ALA. The first three servicewomen to attend the Chemical Corps School at Fort McLeellan, Alabama, two WACs and a WAVE, were among the 93 students who completed three courses at the school recently.

WAVE Lt. Margaret S. Kanapaux was graduated from the two-week course in radiological defense for Navy reserve officers, and WAC corporal Rheta Collins and Shirley Klein completed the six-week chemical warfare defense course.

■ SAN DIEGO, CALIF. Four students were presented honors for their work in the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps at the annual competitive review and drill held recently at San Diego State College.

The Air Force Association Medal was awarded Cadet Maj. Herbert E. Peterson, as the outstanding Air Science student of the year. Col. F. E. Harris, the Commanding Officer of the 9097th Volunteer Air Reserve Group in San Diego, presented the Air Force Reserve Plaque to Cadet Capt. James R. Greek for his qualifications in being at the head of his class in Air Science III. Cadet Greek was also newly elected as the Squadron Commander for the Arnold Air Society. The "Walter R. Hepner" Plaque was presented to Cadet Airman Will B. Allison for being selected as the best student in Air Science II.

The Conval Plaque was presented to Cadet Airman Gordon M. Campbell by Brig. Gen. L. W. Miller, (Ret.), Vice President of Conval Corporation, as an award of outstanding merit in Air Science I.

■ OKINAWA. More than two hundred ladies attended a tea given 16 May at the Rycom Officers Mess. Among the 128 members of the Kadena Officers' Wives Club feted by the Rycom Women's Club were Mrs. Ralph F. Stearley, wife of the commanding general, 20th Air Force; Mrs. Chester P. Gilger, wife of the vice-commander, 20th Air Force; and Mrs. Clarence J. McCall, president of the Kadena group. All three were presented corsages by the Rycom club.

In the receiving line to greet the guests were Mrs. Robert S. Beightler, wife of the (Please turn to Page 1251)

"Operation Fairyland" Starts at Carswell AFB

"Operation Fairyland" is a most unusual project underway at Carswell AFB, Ft. Worth, Tex. Only this "Operation" is sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club, and the plans call for turning the Officers' Nursery into a child's dream world.

This big effort has the cooperation of the entire Nursery Board, Nursery staff, but most of all the work of Duard Marshall, art director for the Ft. Worth Children's Museum. His ideas of turning a drab building into an elaborate fairyland are becoming a reality as M/Sgt. Harold Smith, work director, turns his drawings into colorful celotex characters.

The idea blossomed in December. It was on paper, presented and approved by the governing Nursery Board in January. The entire effort is self-sustained through fees collected from nursery, kindergarten and nursery school activities, Mrs. F. J. Hickman, OWC Nursery chairman reported. All of these activities are housed in the nursery building. Enrollment for the one nursery class and three kindergarten classes totals 180 children. Approximately 700 fledglings use the nursery "baby sitting" facilities over a period of a month.

Mr. Marshall had no trouble getting ideas for brightening up the long entrance hall but he does have trouble selecting just which one would be the most appropriate idea for which panel. A complete "brainchild" is the panel which furnishes the hooks for the children's coats. What could he possibly do to brighten up a hook-rack? Seeing is believing and in this case words cannot do justice to the clever idea of the "Fish-

Eye View." The children who visit the nursery nowadays are eager to hang up their wraps on the fisherman's line near the colorful sinkers and fish covering the panel. "Winkum, Blinkum and Nod," "Humpty Dumpty," "The Man that Walked a Crooked Mile," "The Cow that Jumped over the Moon," and "Little Bo-Peep" are the panels that have been completed for the amazement of the children. The program is not due to be completed until 15 September in order to give the children utmost enjoyment out of each new surprise.

The reception room will soon be known as the Zebra Room when Mr. Marshall's idea of red walls and ceiling with black wainscoting is completed. Plywood zebras will be the center of interest about the room while zebra material will complement the windows and chairs. Another idea will be "Ferdinand." "But," says Mr. Marshall, "I'll have to pull a rabbit out of the hat to think of something to make it fun for the children in the temperature room." Every child must have his temperature read before he is admitted.

Still in the planning stage is the partition of the indoor playroom, separating the smaller children from the larger ones. Here it is planned to use plywood silhouettes of elephants in circus parade style—trunks and tails connecting—for the dividing wall. Other circus animals and fairy story illustrations will be carried throughout the outdoor playground equipment.

So it's no wonder that this fairyland will be a child's dream "out of this world!"

Obituaries

Maj. Gen. Louis H. Bash, USA-Ret.

Maj. Gen. Louis H. Bash, QMC, USA-Ret., died at Palo Alto, Calif., on 24 May at the age of 80.

Former Army Quartermaster General, General Bash was born in Chicago. He was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1895. In the Spanish-American War he served in Cuba, participating in the assault on San Juan Hill, as well as in the siege of Santiago. He served a tour of duty in the Philippines from 1900 to 1907, sharing in the suppression of the Insurrection. General Bash's service also included assignments with the Punitive Expedition into Mexico, and that of Adjutant General of the Service of Supply with the American Expeditionary Forces in France in World War I. On his return from overseas in 1920, he transferred to the Quartermaster Corps, in which he rose steadily. He was named Quartermaster General in 1934. General Bash retired from active duty in 1936.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Bertha Runkle Bash.

Rear Adm. Gordon Hutchins, USN-Ret.

Rear Adm. Gordon Hutchins, USN-Ret., of 405 East 54th St., New York City, died on 24 May at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Philadelphia, after an illness of several months.

Admiral Hutchins was born in New York City on 21 Nov., 1892 and was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy, class of 1913. He was a veteran of the Battle of Vera Cruz, Mexican War, and World Wars I and II. He served in submarines in the early days of that branch of the Navy, attended the U. S. Naval War College at Newport, R. I., and was War Plans Officer on the staff of Admiral Harold R. Stark in London. His sea commands included that of the cruiser USS AUGUSTA. He retired from active duty in 1944.

Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D. C., on 28 May.

Admiral Hutchins is survived by his widow, Mrs. Kathleen R. Hutchins of the New York address, and a son, Capt. Gordon Hutchins, USA.

Mrs. Xavier Smith

Mrs. Xavier (Edith Martin) Smith died 24 May after a long illness at the home of her sister, Miss Ada R. Martin, in Los Angeles, Calif.

Daughter of Capt. and Mrs. David Austen Martin of "Wheatlands," Talbot County, Md., and later of Silver City, N. Mex., she had lived in Los Angeles for many years. Mrs. Smith was born in Baltimore and was educated at the Convent of the Visitation, Georgetown, D. C., from which she was graduated with high honors. She married Peter Xavier Smith, a prominent attorney of Norfolk, Va., who died many years ago. Mrs. Smith traveled widely, contributed to the national magazines and, after her husband's death, for some years was society editor of the Norfolk Virginia-Pilot.

Mrs. Smith is survived by her sister, Miss Ada R. Martin, and a daughter, Miss Dorothy M. Smith, both of Los Angeles; a son, Capt.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Clara Stoner, who resides at 405 West Acacia St., Stockton, Calif. Burial was at the Golden Gate National Cemetery, San Bruno, Calif., with full military honors furnished by the Presidio.

Sergeant Stoner was born in Anamose, Ia., and enrolled in the Army on 7 July 1917 to serve in World War I. He served in Europe in the Infantry, Motor Transportation Corps, and Quartermaster DEMU-Ordinance. He remained in the Army for over 28 years and later served in the United States, China and Philippine Islands. After World War II, he received medical retirement.

He was a member of the Carl Ross Post, #16, American Legion, and the Disabled American Veterans, Chapter #15.

Mrs. Marie Reese

Mrs. Marie Reese, wife of Lt. Comdr. Lloyd W. Reese, sr., USN (Res), and mother of Capt. Lloyd W. Reese, jr., USAF (Res), and Capt. Robert M. Reese, USA, died 23 May.

Devoted to the American heritage, Mrs. Reese and her husband started studying history and writing short plays about famous figures as a hobby. The hobby grew first into a series of newspaper articles; the dramas were later presented over radio, and in 1940 the Reeses published a book, "Parade of Presidents."

"She believed intensely in America and all it stands for and wanted to do whatever she could to keep it strong and free."

Mrs. Reese, 285 E. Torrence Road, Columbus, Ohio, was 50 when she died. She had been ill for five years. She was a graduate of Ohio Northern University and past president of the University Dames at Ohio State University.

Services were held 25 May in St. James Episcopal Church and burial in Gomer, Ohio, near the family home.

Capt. John Constantine Cody, USA-Ret.

Capt. John Constantine Cody, USA-Ret. died at his home at 218 Brees Blvd., San Antonio, Tex. on 14 May, 1952 at the age of 77.

Captain Cody was born in Worcester, Mass. 23 Aug. 1874. He enlisted in the Army 11 Sept. '99 and served through the noncommissioned grades including first sergeant. He was appointed a second lieutenant 30 June '17 and was commissioned a captain in the Regular Army 1 July '20. He was retired at his own request 30 May 1931. He moved to San Antonio where he lived until his death.

ing program. Newly activated ships, and reservists recalled to active duty combine to make this activity a "must" before the ships report to the Far East command for combat duty.

Among the shore commands at Pearl Harbor, the biggest is the Naval Shipyard under the command of Rear Adm. Wallace R. Dowd, USN. From a fixed ceiling of 3,300 civilian workers before Korea, the Shipyard has taken on such a workload that its civilian strength is now approaching 8,000.

It is not unusual for the Shipyard to have fifty ships and craft of varying sizes under repair, overhaul or conversion at one time. Until the buildup of civilian workers reached its present level, overtime was a common practice.

The Supply Center at Pearl Harbor, in point of personnel strength is the No. 2 activity at the Naval Base. Here, more than 2,000 civilians are now employed, providing fuel, stores and material to the fleet units, the naval installations on Oahu, and the outlying islands, such as Kwajalein and Midway.

The Supply Center now has control of about 500 buildings, many storage areas, and a large amount of deck space and facilities for cargo handling.

The present commander of the Supply Center is Rear Adm. George W. Bauernschmidt, SC, USN.

Occupying about twelve square miles on Oahu is the Naval Ammunition Depot, with headquarters at suburban Lualualei, and branches at Waikale Gulch and West Loch in Pearl Harbor.

Ammunition stored and assembled at Lualualei and Waikale Gulch is transported by rail—the only operating railroad in rural Oahu—to the docks at West Loch where it is loaded on United Nations ships headed for the Far East.

The Submarine Base, Marine Barracks and Receiving Station are each individual communities with their own administrative commands, their own messes and recreation facilities.

Receiving Station

The Receiving Station, sometimes referred to as the "Grand Central Station" of the Pacific, again is operating at near capacity, with barracks and BOQ accommodations for 240 officers and 2,500 enlisted men. Great emphasis is placed on a wide variety of recreational facilities.

With dependents permitted entry to the Islands, the housing situation has been a major problem for the past two years. New Title VIII housing projects, now being built at Barber's Point and Moanalu Ridge, are expected to help immeasurably.

Outside the Naval Base on the island of Oahu are other major naval activities which come under the administrative command of the Commandant, Fourteenth Naval District.

Principal among these are the Naval Air Station at Barber's Point, which is being expanded, the newly reactivated base at Kaneohe to be used by the Marine Corps, and the Naval Radio Stations at Wahiawa, Lualualei and Heeia.

Island Bases

The District command includes, besides the Hawaiian Island chain, island bases as far west as Midway and Kwajalein.

Military air traffic uses both Kwajalein and Midway as stopover points. Midway, now a naval station, was reactivated in August 1950 after being closed in June of the same year. Kwajalein has been greatly expanded in the past two years, and is now the major naval base between Hawaii and Guam.

The Commandant also provides space in the Pearl Harbor area for the headquarters of the Commander in Chief, Pacific and U. S. Pacific Fleet, and other fleet commands such as Mine Force, Submarine Force, Service Force, and Fleet Air, Hawaii.

All of the water area in the Central Pacific, with Pearl Harbor at the hub, comprise the third command, that of the Hawaiian Sea Frontier.

The vast Central Pacific area covered by this command comprises 10,813,000 square miles, or one-third more than the area of the United States.

The Hawaiian Sea Frontier is an operational echelon of the Operating Forces of the Pacific Fleet, and is assigned the primary responsibility of coordination and direction of search and rescue, incident to military operations in the area.

Search and Rescue

Increased air and surface traffic across the Central Pacific since the start of the Korean fighting has caused a comparable increase in the activities of the Search and Rescue Unit.

The SAR unit at Pearl Harbor is the central coordination center for search and rescue operations within the Hawaiian Sea Frontier. At its immediate disposal are the facilities of all the armed services and the Coast Guard, including rescue planes, surface vessels, land rescue teams, and communications.

During the first four months of this year, the SAR unit handled 661 alerts. Included were 381 instances of temporary loss of communications and distress calls from military and civilian aircraft in the area.

This outline of the activities within this command is necessarily brief, and many of the important activities and functions have not been mentioned. It is hoped, however, that this description will serve to highlight how vital this triple command—Naval Base, Hawaiian Sea Frontier, Fourteenth Naval District—is to the United States Navy in the Pacific.

Today, 7 June 1952, Rear Admiral McMorris will be relieved of his command by Rear Adm. Stuart S. Murray, USN, who has been Commander, Submarine Force, Atlantic Fleet. Subsequently, Rear Admiral McMorris will be retired from active duty.

Rear Admiral McMorris was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1912. In 1941 and 1942, he was head of the war plans division, staff Commander in Chief, Pacific Area. Subsequently, he commanded the USS San Francisco in action in the Pacific and later was Chief of Staff of the Pacific Fleet and Pacific Ocean Areas.

Adm. Carney Visits Turkey

Admiral Robert B. Carney, Commander in Chief, Allied Forces, Southern Europe, has completed a nine-day inspection trip that carried him as far east in Turkey as the Mt. Ararat region, and along the Bosphorous and the Mediterranean and Black Sea coasts.

Admiral Carney was enthusiastic about many of the installations he viewed in company with General Sahap Gurler, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Turkish General Staff, and representatives of the Turkish Army, Navy and Air Force. He was accompanied on this trip by Brig. Gen. John H. Stokes, U.S. Army, head of the plans and operations division at the Naples NATO headquarters.

Coordinate Bid Openings

The Army Corps of Engineers and the Navy Bureau of Yards & Docks, through their field offices, are coordinating bid-opening dates for major military construction projects in the United States.

A large number of major construction contracts are scheduled to be let during the next several months by both agencies. This includes Air Force construction which is handled by the Army Engineers.

Only bid-opening dates for military construction projects estimated to cost $1,000,000 or more will be coordinated.

French police were fully informed on its scope and Premier Pinay was fully prepared to make his own swift counterattack where the Reds were weakest. The Communists' prime mistake, of course, was in letting the Red leader Duclos expose himself with a blackjack and a loaded pistol (plus those mysterious dead pigeons) for thereby Duclos entrapped himself and all but asked for admission to the lock-up. The Parisian Red rioters' use of nail-studded clubs was another unfortunate contrast with the "peace" motif of official Communism, and the French police authorities' simultaneous raids on Red headquarters in other French cities appear to have uncovered a good deal of evidence (in the form of arms and documents) to support the charge that there was a well-formed plan in many metropolitan areas for resistance to the French governmental authority. The fact is not exactly new; the solid evidence had not previously been accumulated so convincingly. The reprisal strikes promptly called by the Red-controlled labor federation were not so effective as they could have been a few years ago for French workers, usually ready for a holiday, were not ready for this one. As a result, the French communists are disclosed as less powerful than they were, and Premier Pinay, closely following his victory of a week ago in the Battle of the Franc, now is recognized as a much sturdier figure than the outside world (or the Reds) had believed him to be. The whole Paris demonstration was timed, of course, to support the Moscow program for exploiting the fake Red charges in Korea and the fake German-unity program; it has worked out very badly from the Moscow viewpoint.

The Red authorities in East Germany have continued their slowly increasing blockade tactics without indicating the extent to which they are prepared to go in the weeks to come. Their start was on the 600-mile frontier separating the Russian zone from western Germany; at the week-end they operated in and around West Berlin, closing down on the normal road-assistance military patrols sent out on the corridor highway leading from Berlin to the west, blocking altogether 150 of the 180 highways leading out of Berlin, evicting the inoffensive inhabitants of several border communities, and notifying West Berliners whose work habitually takes them into the Soviet zone that they will have to receive trip-passes from the Red traffic authorities—who with customary Russian efficiency were not informed of their new responsibility. The Reds' "nuisance-actions" were increased by spasmodic interruptions to telephone service. But thus far there has been no interference with the main traffic to and from the west or to that on the 30 guarded highways, presumably on the Red reasoning that this would hurt the Reds appreciably in their "German unity" propaganda. Mayor Ernst Reuter, an indomitable figure in Berlin's resistance to the Reds, is quoted as predicting that the Reds are biding their time, and will probably resume the tightening of the noose about West Berlin in the Autumn, timing it to match the expected ratification of the two treaties lately initiated by West Germany with the western powers—the contract for West Germany's approximate independence and that agreement for the European Defense Community. The timing and the exact procedure are in doubt; the main intent is clear. The British command in West Berlin, on a tit-for-tat basis, put up barbed wire barricades about the Reds' radio-broadcast station in their zone. Anybody can get out at will, but nobody gets in, not even the grocer's boy.

Ft. Belvoir A. G.

Col. Camille H. Du Val has been named Adjutant General of the Engineer Center at Ft. Belvoir, Va., succeeding Maj. Richard G. Crawford. Before assuming his new post, Colonel Du Val served for eight months in the Adjutant General's Office at the Pentagon.

Adm. Land Addresses Grads at Transportation School

The President of the Air Transport Association of America, Vice Adm. Emory Scott Land, U. S. Navy Retired, delivered the graduation address 29 May to the 71 U. S. Regular Army and foreign officers who completed the Transportation Officers Advanced Course at the Army's Transportation Center, Ft. Eustis, Va.

Admiral Land cited the Far East air lift as "the greatest transport feat of all times," and called it a product of teamwork.

The distinguished guest speaker was introduced by Brig. Gen. Harold R. Duffie, Commandant of the Transportation School and Commanding General of Ft. Eustis.

Maj. Morris L. Lindsey was the number one student, having achieved the highest total score for the duration of the class. Lt. Col. William B. Derrickson, jr., was the class leader.

Diplomas were presented by Admiral Land, Brigadier General Duffie, and Col. Edmund C. R. Lasher, Assistant Commandant of the Transportation School.

Shipping to Korea

The part played by shipping management in the Korean War was hailed by Adm. E. L. Cochrane, Maritime Administrator. In testimony released recently, Admiral Cochrane told the Senate Appropriations Committee that the National Shipping Authority could not have accomplished its work without employing private shipping companies as general agents to operate the vessels. Admiral Cochrane was testifying on the subsidized voyage limitation question.

"It is interesting in that connection," said Admiral Cochrane, "that the number of ships which these companies took on and have operated for us this past winter exceeded the number that they were operating themselves when the trouble started, which, as I say, is a very remarkable performance. That made it possible, in connection with the Korean show, and with the support of the effort in Western Europe, to meet all of the requirements of the military. So that as far as I can discover there never has been a ton of military cargo on the docks awaiting a ship for which we have been asked to make provision."

20% For Defense at GMC

President C. E. Wilson of the General Motors Corporation has reported that about 20 per cent of total production is now going to defense.

He said that a special study is going forward to determine the extent GMC plants can be operated with a dual load, civilian and defense, or be changed from one to the other as the situation demands.

INDUSTRY * FINANCE * MARITIME

$32 Billion Procurement

During the first ten months of fiscal year 1952 (July 1951-April 1952), the Department of Defense obligated $32.0 billion for the procurement of major equipment, supplies, military construction and expansion of military production facilities. Of this, the Army has obligated $11.7 billion, the Navy $8.8 billion, and the Air Force $11.5 billion.

These obligations reflect orders placed during the ten-month period and include both contracts with private industry and project orders placed with Department of Defense industrial establishments such as shipyards and arsenals.

Obligations for procurement of "hard goods" (aircraft, ships, tanks, weapons, ammunition, production equipment, electronics and other equipment) amounted to $26.7 billion, with "soft goods" procurement obligations (clothing, subsistence, and petroleum) aggregating $3.5 billion and construction $1.8 billion. Procurement for the Mutual Security Assistance Program accounts for $2.4 billion of the $26.7 billion obligated for "hard goods."

As of 1 May 1952, $18.5 billion was still available for obligation by the Department of Defense for procurement and construction programs, with $14.1 billion available for "hard goods," $5 billion for "soft goods" and $3.9 billion for construction.

Total Department of Defense obligations for the ten months, including military pay and allowances, research and development and other activities, as well as procurement and construction funds, were approximately $46.2 billion.

New C-119H Test Flown

The C-119H, newest member of the Flying Boxcar family, started its initial flight test program on 27 May at Hagerstown, Md.

A bigger wing, rough-field landing gear, greater payload, longer range, and short-field take-off and landing characteristics mark the "H" as different from earlier Fairchild troop and cargo transports, the manufacturer states.

By extending wing-span from 109 to 148 feet through complete redesign, Fairchild engineers have increased wing area by approximately 40 per cent. Lateral and vertical tail surfaces of the C-119H are essentially the same as those of the C-119C in appearance, although considerably larger.

Most obvious change in the airplane's configuration is the application of external fuel cells, all fuel being carried in two pods beneath the wings. This new feature has been adopted for its weight-saving, servicing, and safety advantages. It is powered by two Wright R-3350-30W compound engines developing 3,500 horsepower each.

The plane is said to be capable of taking off over a 50-foot obstacle within 2,600 feet, landing in a distance of only 1,300 feet, and delivering 27,200 pounds of cargo.

Naval Research Seminar

One hundred Naval Reserve officers representing many different fields of scientific and technical research will report to the Office of Naval Research, Washington, for the Fifth Annual Research Seminar, beginning 9 June. These officers are members of 90 Naval Research Reserve Seminar, beginning 9 June. These officers are members of 90 Naval Research Reserve units located throughout the United States with a membership of approximately 2,500, and represent nearly every state in the union.

Rear Adm. C. M. Bolster, Chief of Naval Research, will extend greetings and introduce Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball, who will address the seminar. Among those who will speak to the group during the two weeks' program are: Vice Adm. L. T. DuBose, Chief of Naval Personnel; Brig. Gen. Melvin J. Maas, USMCR, Deputy Director, Civilian Components Policy Board; Miss Jane Weidlund, Liaison Officer, Department of Public Information, UN, New York City; Rear Adm. Charles F. Behrens, MC, Staff Medical Officer, Commander, Eastern Sea Frontier; Rear Adm. Winfred P. Dana, MC, Assistant Chief, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery for Research and Medical Military Specialties; and Maj. Herbert Rollins, Reserve Training Officer, Air Force Research and Development Command. Many other outstanding speakers are scheduled to address the group.

Navy Speeds Procurement

Three major policy steps to speed procurement and production of defense materials have been taken by the Navy. Vice Adm. Charles W. Fox, SC, Chief of Naval Material, has announced.

The first step has been to speed up the process of converting Letters of Intent to firm contracts. In the future, Letters of Intent will be restricted to essential cases. A reasonable time will be provided for conversion of letters to contracts and those not converted will be continuously investigated. Differences on contracting terms will be referred to high authority for action when contracts are unreasonably delayed.

The new plan was established following a study by Armed Services representatives and civilian experts in the field of production and procurement. The Navy reported that there has been an encouraging reduction of outstanding letters already.

In a second move to speed production, all Naval Inspection Offices have been ordered to report production delays and bottle-necks that have not been cleared by routine methods, to the Office of Naval Material. The plan was tested in the Chicago area and the majority of 92 cases reported have been cleared.

In a third action, the Navy ordered that all offices and bureaus speed the time between requests for bids and beginning of actual production.

Mobile QM Repair Teams

A nation-wide system of mobile inspection and repair has been set up by the Army Quartermaster Corps to maintain Quartermaster mechanical equipment in this country in top operating condition.

The plan involves six permanent roving repair crews of six men each and virtually eliminates the need for shipping heavy Quartermaster mechanical equipment to central locations for repair and maintenance. The new system has been under test since 1949, when two experimental teams were established to test its feasibility.

Prior to establishment of the new system, all major repair of Quartermaster mechanical equipment was performed at the Quartermaster Depot at Jeffersonville, Ind., or the Quartermaster Section of the Utah General Depot at Ogden, Utah. Now, the equipment may be repaired at any of seven Quartermaster depots, at 10 Army general depots, or at any other Army installation where major repairs are required. This system not only saves cost of packing, crating and transporting of equipment to Jeffersonville or Ogden, but also saves shipping time and shipping space.

Maj. Comeaux Retires

Maj. C. Stewart Comeaux retired 1 June as Executive Secretary-Treasurer of both the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers Institute and the Institute of the Makers of Explosives.

Major Comeaux assisted in organizing the explosives group in 1913 and has served it since in his present capacity. After aiding in the establishment of the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Institute in 1926 he was appointed its Secretary-Treasurer.

Major Comeaux is a director of the American Ordnance Association, Washington, D. C.

He was a reserve officer for nearly 30 years and was special assistant to the Chief of Ordnance during World War II.

Succeeding him as Executive Secretary-Treasurer of the Institute of the Makers of Explosives and of the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Institute will be Richard F. Webster, his assistant.

Zone Transportation Offices

Establishment of four field transportation offices under the Army Chief of Transportation at Pittsburgh, Pa., Memphis, Tenn., St. Louis, Mo., and Salt Lake City, Utah, is announced. It is planned that the first of these field offices will be in operation by 1 Aug. 1952.

These offices are being established as a result of the increased emphasis on improvement in military traffic management. They are expected to accomplish substantial economies in military movements. Included in the functions of the new offices will be the routing of domestic freight traffic, currently being performed in Washington, D. C.

The field transportation offices will be staffed principally with civilian personnel recruited locally and will vary in strength from 40 to 60 persons.

Wins Quartermaster Award

The U. S. Quartermaster Research Directors Award was presented this week to Dr. Joseph D. Loconti of the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot Pioneering Research & Development Laboratories. As Chief of the High Polymer Laboratory, Dr. Loconti was honored for his work in the development of Temperature Indicators.

Honorable mention was received by David Feldman, technologist of the Textile and Leather Division of the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot Research & Development Laboratories for his achievements in flame-proofing of textiles.

commanding general of the Ryukyus Command, U. S. Army; Mrs. E. H. Eddy, president of the Rycum Women's Club; Mrs. Hugh D. McGraw, Mrs. Roger H. Holt, Mrs. B. W. Hedges, Mrs. Roy H. Scott and Mrs. James D. Stephens. Mrs. Edmond H. Leavy, jr., introduced the Air Force ladies to Mrs. Beightler and the others in the receiving line. Acting as hostesses were Mrs. A. E. Montgomery, Mrs. Thomas A. Lane and Mrs. A. F. Ghelardi. Refreshments were served buffet-style. Presiding at the attractively floral decorated tables were Mrs. Warren A. Robinson, Mrs. Samuel A. Cohen, Mrs. Robert J. Cook, Mrs. Seymour S. Bernfeld, Mrs. Roger O. Williams and Mrs. Raymond A. Seifert.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. Wives of Air Force officers in the Los Angeles area, who live great distances from each other and have no Officers' Club facilities for social activities, as they might have if they were living on or near a base, had their first get-together on 27 May, at a luncheon on the "Dining Deck" of the world-famous Farmer's Market, at the invitation of Mrs. Lee Morgan, wife of Maj. Gen. William M. Morgan, USAF, commanding the Western Air Procurement District. More than 50 wives of USAF officers attended the luncheon, eaten outdoors in the California sunshine.

As a result of this first meeting, the Women agreed to have a similar luncheon once a month at some interesting dining spot in the Southland.

BROOKS AFB, TEX. A "Vacation Time" style show luncheon was given by the Officers' Wives Club 3 June, at the Officers' Club. Modeling summer styles from Joske's were Mesdames Roy H. Lynn, J. E. Warrick, A. O. Smith, Lewis W. Fogg, Vincent Donohue, and Thomas F. Hanchett.

Members of the Social Committee who planned this event were Mesdames R. S. Dorsey, Chairman, Waiter W. Lavell, F. J. Grady, Richard C. Bluestein, John B. McClellan, Richard D. Small, and James G. Ray. Hostesses were Mesdames Koerner R. Stone, L. L. Rohr, and Raymond Mokschanowski.

LOGAN, UTAH. The Officers' Wives Club Spring Dinner Meeting was held 13 May. Mrs. Russel Foster and Mrs. Robert Howard acted as co-hostesses.

After a dinner at the Bluebird Cafe, a business meeting was held and new officers were installed. They are: Mrs. Avery C. Bruce, president replacing Mrs. Arthur L. Mac Kuskic; Mrs. L. M. Johnson, vice president and Red Cross chairman, replacing Mrs. Wm. M. Dickson; Mrs. Irvan J. Church, secretary-treasurer, replacing Mrs. Byron C. Watts; Mrs. Thomas Madden, program chairman, replacing Mrs. Owen E. Litz; Mrs. James Yacavone, publicity chairman, replacing Mrs. Joseph W. Lyons.

Following the meeting, Lt. Col. A. H. Mac Kuskic showed colored slides on Europe at the Mac Kuskic residence.

FT. KNOX, KY. The Armored Center is bidding farewell to one of its most familiar personalities—CWO Russell O. Christian, conductor of the post's 158th Army Band since October 1950. Mr. Christian is slated to depart shortly for a new assignment in the Caribbean Command. In ceremonies at TAC headquarters 23 May, post commander Maj. Gen. I. D. White, USA, officially commended the band conductor for "a performance to duty in the finest traditions of Army musicianship and service."

The wives of student officers were presented PHT ("Pushing Hubby Through") Diplomas recently at an Aloha Tea given by the Officer Candidate Detachment and the Command and Staff Department of The Armored School at Brick Officers' Club.

Hostesses were Mrs. Polly Johnson, wife of Col. Harry W. Johnson, C & S director; and Mrs. William H. Wood, wife of the OCD director. The club was attractively decorated in the international theme, with Korean, Bavarian, Spanish, Chinese, and Japanese costumes and large maps hanging on the walls.

Mrs. I. D. White and Mrs. Lacey Tynes poured. There were approximately 180 ladies present for the event.

HEIDELBERG, GERMANY. The wives of the 34th AAA Brigade honored Mrs. Paul W. Rutledge with a bridge-luncheon on 21 May at the Macogen Club in Heidelberg, Maj. Gen. Paul W. Rutledge, USA, a former commander of the 34th Brigade, was recently appointed Inspector General of the European Command.

Mrs. R. R. Hendrix, wife of the present Brigade commander, Brig. Gen. R. R. Hendrix, officiated. Other guests included Mrs. J. S. Albergotti, C. E. Gushurst, R. H. Zimmerman, R. W. Flake, W. L. Thomas, K. Lehmann, T. Wyckoff, R. E. Campbell, E. N. Sacks, I. C. Whittemore, M. A. Gersten, and J. E. Blake.

ATHENS, GREECE. Maj. Gen. Charles E. Hart, Chief of the Joint United States Mil-

tary Aid Group to Greece, and Mrs. Hart entertained with a reception on 17 May in celebration of Armed Forces Day.

Guests included all members of the U. S. Army, Navy and Air Force stationed in Athens, members of the Embassies of the NATO countries and others, and government and military officials of Greece.

The host and hostess were assisted by their twin daughters, Misses Susie Jane and Sally Ann, and a group of JUSMAGG officers and their wives.

The house was beautifully decorated through-out with spring flowers. Guests mingled in the garden which bore an air of festivity with colored lights strung among the trees.

PEPPERRELL AFB. Sixteen Northeast Air Command master sergeants have been promoted to warrant officer junior grade in the USAF, according to an announcement by Col. Roy D. Butler, NEAC Commanding Officer.
